BRIDE WATCHES AIRMAN PLUNGE TO RIVER DEATH

U. S. Pilot, 26, Drowned After 200-Foot Dive Into Potomac.

VOLUNTEER SAILORS RECOVER MAN'S BODY

Lifeless Form Strapped to Flying Boat When Found in Waters.

While his bride of a few weeks gazed in horror Donald T. Stevens, 26, Department of Commerce radio engineer, met his death in the Potomac River yesterday afternoon when the flying boat he was piloting plunged from a 200-foot elevation and partially sank to drown him, helpless in his strapped cockpit seat.

The tragedy occurred in midstream, between Anacostia Naval Air Station and Hains Point, shortly after 3 o'clock, when the Speedway was thick with automobiles and pedestrians. Parked in a machine at the end of the point his wife, Mrs. Ruth Stevens, watched her husband crash to his death.

A thrilling rescue attempt was initiated by Lieut. A. P. Storrs, on duty at the Naval Air Station as officer of the day, who at the first information flash of the accident headed a group of volunteer sailors in a Navy speedboat to midchannel, where the plane, a tangled mass of wreckage, floated almost completely submerged, with only the splintered tip of a wing bobbing out of the water to mark the scene.

Efforts Are in Vain.

The body, held fast to the cockpit, was dragged to the surface speedily and a Navy Hospital apprentice aboard the rescue craft worked for a few minutes in vain on the lifeless form before giving an unofficial announcement of death. A waiting Navy ambulance rushed the body to Emergency Hospital, where Dr. Floyd Eastlack confirmed the examination. He said Stevens had been drowned, finding that the man had received no injuries other than minor lacerations about the face and lips.

The flying boat, owned by a friend of Stevens and brought here recently from Detroit, had been anchored between Hains Point and the War College, where Stevens had boarded it in early afternoon to make tests, at the request of his friend, before the plane was to be flown South.

Ashore his wife and a woman companion had watched him fly the plane for about fifteen minutes, when he indicated that he was planning to land on the water. Cruising at a 200-foot elevation, the plane suddenly was seen to go into a lurch known as a "slow spin" and then plunge, nose down, into the water.

Graduate of Minnesota.

Stevens was a native of Minnesota and was a graduate of the University of Minnesota. His mother resides at Monticello, Minn. He came to Washington in the fall of 1928 and accepted employment as radio engineer in the airways division, aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce. Qualifying for his position because of his ability also as a pilot, experience gained as a Naval Reserve at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station in summers from the university, he spent more than half his working hours in flying for the department. His work, taking him throughout the country, was in the establishment and testing of radio beacon and radio communication stations among other duties.

Considerable excitement was created at Hains Point by the accident. As a courtesy to Mrs. Stevens, park police gave her a motorcycle escort, which cleared a way for her car to the Naval Air Station.

Turkey May Hang 14 More Fanatics

Another Antireligious Plot Uncovered; Suspects to Face Trial.

Istanbul, Turkey, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—A reactionary religious organization called the "New Faith Society" was uncovered today at Gallipoli and it was believed that those arrested would be hanged, as were 27 other reactionaries at Menemen recently.

Fourteen members were taken in the Gallipoli raid, among them their leader, Sheik Ali. They were sent to Menemen for military trial.

Such organizations have sprung up because the government of Mustapha Kemal has brought Western ideas to Turkey, including the abolition of the traditional fez and the establishment of the Latin alphabet. Adherents of the old regime are seeking the restoration of the caliphate.

Will Rogers and Hawks End Tour in California

NOTED FLIER DIES

JOHN S. KYTLE.

VETERAN MAIL PILOT DIES IN PLANE CRASH

CAREER WAS THRILLING

Atlanta, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Johnny Kytle, veteran pilot and blazer of mail trails, who successfully dared death in the air for nine years, was killed today when his plane hurtled to earth in a stunting exhibition at Candler Field. He was 25 years old.

Kytle began his career in the clouds at 16 and for three years had been employed to make the hazardous night mail flight between Atlanta and Richmond for the Eastern Air Transport Co.

His battles with the elements included two crashes with mountain sides, and in September, 1929, he earned membership in the Caterpillar Club by taking to his parachute near Crew, Va., and landing in safety, although his ship was destroyed.

Perhaps his most celebrated exploit occurred on May 8, 1928, when his plane plunged into Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, during a night rainstorm. He salvaged the mail and escaped with only a split lip and a broken finger although his ship was demolished.

On August 18, 1928, he crashed into a mountain near Old Fort, N. C., the impact stripping both wings from his ship and the plane buried its nose in a mud bank. Kytle's only hurts were a cut on the chin and a sprained wrist.

Forced down near Rural Hall, N. C., on October 1, 1928, by a storm, Kytle's plane caught fire and became a flaming mass of fabric shortly after he had rescued the mail.

The Constitution says Kytle went aloft to test a plane being flown from a Springfield, Mass., factory to a new Los Angeles sales agency.

The newspaper said J. H. Harris, owner of the plane, told Kytle he wanted an experienced and competent pilot at each point visited to try out the ship.

Man Slays Partner Suspected in Killing

Kannapolis, N. C., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—A man awaiting trial for murder was shot to death near here late today by his business partner, who had helped bail him out of jail.

Bill Etheridge, 50, charged with slaying John Hinsley last October, died instantly when Henry Norris, 30, his partner in a grocery store, fired a pistol bullet through his chest.

Norris surrendered to police a few minutes after the shooting, saying he had shot the older man in self-defense after they had engaged in an argument as to where they would play poker.

MARINE GUARD FOILS BANDITS IN ARMED CAR

Finding Machine Gun in Auto Believed to Have Averted Holdup.

NAVAL ACADEMY PAY ROLL WAS OBJECTIVE

Four Men Disappear as Sentry Phones Report to Officials.

Washington authorities have been asked to watch for an automobile bearing District tags which was used by four bandits, armed with a machine gun, in what is believed to have been at attempt to rob the pay office at the Naval Academy late Saturday night.

The semimonthly pay off for the large compliement of officers, civilian instructors and other employes is due today, and the money in the place was probably the incentive for the bandits.

Their plans were aborted by the vigilance of Russell Oehman, a Marine private, who was doing sentry duty outside of the pay office. Private Oeehman became suspicious of the car bearing four men and he sauntered close to it and observed a machine gun on the floor of the car.

Car Driven Away.

While he was telephoning his suspicions the car was driven away. Officials of the academy selected a squad of pistol experts from the first class of midshipmen to stand ready in case the suspicious characters returned.

The pay office is located in the large power house building along the Severn River water front. Lieut. Comdr. Donald B. Beary, aid to Rear Admiral Samual S. Robison, superintendent of the academy, said that Private Oehman observed the men step from the car and engage in conversation for several minutes.

Private Oehman walked near the automobile and when he observed the machine gun he telephoned a report to the corporal of the guard at No. 1 gate of the naval reservation. A thorough search of the entire reservation was made for the car, which disappeared during Oehman's absence.

News of Affair Spread.

News of the affair spread about the reservation, and guards were doubled at all entrances. Marines were detailed to supplement the regular watchmen. Private Oehman did not get the number of the license tags.

Apparently the would-be bandits made a study of conditions and selected a comparatively quiet time to attempt the robbery. A crowd of visitors had just left the reservation after attending the boxing bouts between the Navy and the University of Pennsylvania and a large portion of the naval contingents were gathered in the auditorium to witness a dramatic performance by the Masqueraders, a midshipmen's organization.

Rear Admiral Robison left the performance to assume charge of the military group scouring the academy grounds. Automobile traffic had been permitted within the academy grounds because of the boxing meet and the dramatic performance.

Four Killed, Ten Hurt In Collapse of Wall

Lima, Peru, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Four men were killed and ten seriously injured when they were entombed last night by the collapse of a wall of a building in which they had just extinguished a fire.

The survivors and the bodies of those killed were taken from the smoking debris by soldiers and other volunteer firemen.

WILL RESIGN

SAMUEL R. M'KELVIE.

M'KELVIE TO RETIRE FROM FARM BOARD

LEGGE'S WORK PRAISED

Chicago, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Samuel R. McKelvie, wheat member of the Farm Board, announced today he will retire from the Federal body at the expiration of his term, June 15.

Mr. McKelvie told of his decision while being question here regarding the projected retiremnt of Chairman Alexander Legge from the board next month.

While disclaiming knowledge of Mr. Legge's plans, the Nebraskan, en route to Washington after a trip to his home State, expressed regret at the Legge decision, which was announced yesterday. He said the farmers of the United States never would have on the board the services of a more devoted friend of agriculture than Chairman Legge.

"When he took the office of Farm Board chairman," Mr. McKelvie said, "Mr. Legge did so at a personal sacrifice and on condition that he serve a year. He accomplished two years' work in his first year in office. Last year the cooperatives of the country handled approximately one-fifth of the wheat crop, one-third of the wool crop, large proportions of the cotton and other crops. This showing may not be credited exclusively to the board, but it shows progress.

"The Farm Board," he added, "will be going long after you and I are gone."

Mr. McKelvie stated emphatically that he was not a candidate for the office to be vacated by Mr. Legge. Regarding James C. Stone, of Kentucky, present vice chairman, who has been mentioned prominently for the chairmanship in connection with reports at various times of Mr. Legge's plans to retire, Mr. McKelvie said: "The report has been current, and it has not been denied."

Like Mr. Legge, Mr. McKelvie plans to devote his attention to his own business affairs after he leaves the Farm Board "not later than June 15."

"I said when I left the governorship," he commented, "that I was throught with politics. I accepted the Farm Board office only because I did not consider it a political job."

Whether any other members of the board contemplate withdrawing, Mr. McKelvive said he was unable to say.

Speculation Names Stone.

(Associated Press.)

Speculation on the successor of Alexander Legge as chairman of the Farm Board last night centered on the vice chairman, James C. Stone, of Kentucky.

Mr. Legge is preparing to retire from his $12,000-a-year Government

SUSPECTED RUM AUTO HURLS VICTIM 80 FEET

Man, Pinned Beneath Car, Dies in Hospital; Aged Woman Succumbs.

Four persons are dead and one was critically injured as the traffic toll of Washington and environs yesterday.

Struck by an automobile while he was rolling up a hose at a fire in Ballston, Va., to which he and other members of the Ballston Volunteer Fire Department had responded, Eugene Payne, 65 years old, received injuries which caused his death while en route to Georgetown Hospital.

The car which struck Payne was operated by Paul Ellis Schmidt, 33 years old, of Alaska avenue northwest, near Georgia avenue, who, with Mrs. Cy. McDonald, a neighbor, was returning from a wedding party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wilkinson, near Falls Church.

Driver Held Under Bond.

Firemen placed Payne in the engine and rushed him to the hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Death was due to crushed ribs and internal hemorrhages. Schmidt, who went to the hospital, returned to the Arlington County Jail, where he was ordered held on bond of $2,000 for investigation by the grand jury this morning.

Speeding while pursued by two Prince Georges County policemen, who had followed it from Laurel, Md., at a rate varying from 60 to 70 miles per hour, a car believed to be bearing liquor struck and killed Clarence E. Johnson, colored, 30 years old, of North Brentwood, Md., as he was about to board a street car at Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue in Mount Rainier. Without stopping, the automobile continued on its way toward Washington.

Johnson was hurled 80 feet, according to witnesses. Two motorists placed his mutilated body in their car and drove to Sibley Hospital, where he was pronounced dead by Dr. W. H. Clement. The doctor said the body was horribly mutilated and crushed.

Chase Begun at Laurel.

County Policeman Claude Reese said that he and another officer had started on the train of the car at Laurel, but that they had been unable to overtake it. The officers fired several shots and say that two of them pierced the rear of the auto. The identity of th occupants is believed to be known, and their arrest is anticipated.

Johnson was a chef employed at a lunch room in Mount Rainier. For some time his body was unidentified, but later relatives came to the hospital and recognized it.

Robert V. Coogan, 21 years old, of Westport, Md., died in Casualty Hospital at noon yesterday from internal injuries received three hours before when he was pinned under an automobile which was overturned in a traffic collision at South Carolina avenue and Fourteenth street southeast.

Mr. Coogan was a passenger in a car driven by Walter Groves, 40 years old, of Westport. When struck by a machine said to have been operated by Sylvester Small, colored, 18 years old, of T street near Second street

G. O. P. LEADERS CLASH OVER PLAN FOR BONUS MEASURE VOTE TODAY

Methodists Attack Mabel Willebrandt

Accuse Her of Trying to Keep U. S. Hands Off Wine Concern, Lent $20,000,000—Women's Cigarettes Condemned.

(Associated Press.)

A joint attack on "the tobacco companies" and manufacturers of grape concentrates, fermentable into wine, was initiated yesterday by the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance.

In its weekly clip-sheet the board urged amendment of section 29 of the Volstead act, pertaining to the manufacture of fruit juices for home consumption. "The effort to flood American homes with intoxicating wines inevitably will result in want and in cruelty to little children," it was continued.

Another editorial condemned the creation of an "impression that the use of cigarettes by young women is socially necessary," and the testimony "bought" from physicians and others concerning the effects of tobacco.

"We believe," the board said, "that the unbought testimony of tens of thousands of conscientious physicians would be found upon the other side, and if we are right, the tobacco companies stand convicted of profiteering in the flesh and blood of unborn children."

The board attributed much of the 600,000,000 increase in cigarette sales in 1930 to increased smoking by girls.

"If alcohol in the blood of the mother reaches the unborn child * * * certainly nicotine in the blood of the mother will reach and poison her unborn babe in the same way," it was argued.

In its leading editorial the board said that for two years it had been

FALL FROM TRAPEZE FATAL TO AERIALIST

OFTEN PLAYED IN U. S.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Lillian Leitzel, one of the daintiest and most popular of all circus stars, died today in a delirium as a result of a plunge to the floor in Valencia Music Hall Friday night, when an iron trapeze ring broke.

The little star, who was a favorite with circus fans in many countries, plunged headlong to the floor, receiving injuries to her head and spine. With the usual courage of circus performers, she made light of her injuries.

A rally in her condition yesterday gave hope she would recover, but she became worse today and the injuries to her brain led to her death.

The large crowd at the circus gasped in horror as the daring little trapeze artist was hurled to the floor with only a rubber mat to break her fall. At the time, however, it was believed she was not seriously hurt and she protested against being taken to a hospital.

On learning of the accident, her Mexican husband, Alfredo Cordona, hastened from Berlin in an airplane. He was appearing with another troupe in Berlin. After Miss Leitzel's improvement he left here to return to his company.

Shortly after his departure her condition took a turn for the worse and she died. Crowds of her admirers in Copenhagen, where she was a great favorite, were mourning her death today.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The grief of the show world at the death in Copenhagen of Lillian Leitzel as the result of a trapeze fall was expressed tonight by Dexter Fellowes, dean of circus exploitation men, who knew the dainty aerialist for more than twenty years.

"Miss Leitzel was brought to the United States about twenty years ago by a showman named Ieamy," Fellowes said. "She was then not more than 17 years old and was one of

BELLBOY CAPTURES ALLEGED ROBBER

$49 TAKEN FROM TILL

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 15.—Alertness of a Negro bellboy resulted in the capture early today of a stranger who is alleged to have held up the Commercial Hotel, in the heart of the business district, and rifled the cash drawer of overnight receipts amounting to $49, while he covered L. L. Heishman, night clerk, with a revolver.

The man, who afterward told police he was Herbert Lukie, of Twenty-seventh street near Garfield street northwest, Washington, and was on his way to New Orleans in a touring car, entered the hotel about 6:30 a. m., and loitered in the lobby until Philip Ford, bellboy, went upstairs in the elevator. He then approached Mr. Heishman, who was alone, whipped out a pistol and ordered him to hold up his hands. As Mr. Heishman did so, the robber opened the cash register, scooped up all the change and backed out with a warning to Mr. Heishman to keep quiet.

As the man drove off, Philip Ford, hearing an outcry from Mr. Heishman, pursued him and effected the capture on the street at a filling station.

Fish Shop Theft Nets Man Just Out of Jail

Bernard Heil, 24 years old, was released from the District Jail Thursday morning, after serving a year for breaking into the sea food house of S. W. Russell, at 930 C street northwest. Thursday night he was back in jail again.

Precinct Detective A. D. Mansfield arrested Heil a year ago, and when an alarm came on Thursday night that the place had again been entered, Detective Mansfield arrested Heil near the sea food place. Heil was held for investigation and was last night charged with housebreaking. The loot was $10.38.

QUICK ACTION SOUGHT TO BEAT POCKET VETO

Extent of Treasury Burden in Dispute; Revolt Is Felt in Senate.

(Associated Press.)

Opposition to Speaker Longworth's plan for House action today on veterans' legislation was voiced last night by Republican Leader Tilson in a statement assailing the procedure and announcing his determination to vote against the measure.

The open break in the House Republican leadership came as sponsors of the measure to increase loans to 50 per cent on service certificates forecast quick action by Congress in an effort to lay the legislation before President Hoover early enough to avoid a possible pocket veto.

This has been predicted in administration circles and Mr. Tilson's statement added strength to the opinion. He is a strong administration follower.

The Connecticut Republican took his stand as Congress rested over Sunday after disposing of the controversial drought relief measure last Saturday.

Calls Decision Regrettable.

"The apparent determination to pass under suspension of the rules of the House," Mr. Tilson said, "the so-called bonus certificate bill is, in my judgment, most regrettable."

He charged there had been insufficient time in which to study the proposal and said he could not support a measure "recklessly rushed to a vote over the protest of the Treasury."

Recalling that Secretary Mellon opposed the measure because he fears it will cost more than $1,000,000,000, Mr. Tilson added:

"Every one is left in doubt as to what will be the effect on the Treasury, its fiscal operations, and especially the effect upon financing this and other outstanding obligations of the Government.

"Secretary Mellon has indicated that such a measure will disrupt all the well-laid plans of the Treasury for the immediate future. Under such circumstances to plunge ahead, making a long leap in the dark, would be, in my judgment, incurring a dangerous and unjustifiable risk."

Opposes Strain on Treasury.

Mr. Tilson said there should be no difficulty in preparing a bill that would permit additional loans to veterans "in actual need" and that would not put a strain on the Treasury.

"I shall be glad to support such a bill," he added, "but can not bring myself to support a measure thus recklessly rushed to a vote over the protest of the Treasury and without any adequate explanation as to the extent of the obligation it imposes, how the funds to meet the obligation are to be secured, or what the effect will be upon the country at large, the veterans and their dependents included."

"It seems to be not generally understood that there is no ready cash in the Treasury with which to meet such a demand. * * * No one can foretell what might be the effect of a financial operation of such magnitude as would be necessary to meet such a demand under present conditions."

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, announced yesterday he would ask hearings by the Senate finance committee on the measure, but overwhelming Senate support for the legislation was in prospect and precipitate action appeared likely.

A veto by President Hoover is predicted in administration circles as the result of the opposition of Secretary Mellon, who fears it will cost the Treasury more than $1,000,000,000. Interest on Capitol Hill has cen-

British Rum Craft Sinks; Rescued Sailors Are Held

Diplomatic Problem Seen as Crew Claims Immunity Under S O S Call and Coast Guard Charges Smuggling; Cargo Worth $75,000.

New York, Feb. 15 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—With the British flag flying over the 3,500 cases of assorted liquors stored below her decks, the eleven-man crew of the Algie, said by Coast Guardsmen to be a rumrunner, decided to risk arrest this morning, rather than death, when their ship sprang a leak and foundered in Long Island Sound off Montauk Point.

At 3:30 o'clock this morning, a Coast Guardsman, who saw the vivid S O S flash of rockets sent up from the Algie, ran to the nearby Dutch Plains Station and summoned Boatswain Warner and a dozen additional men to rescue the British crew.

The survivors were brought ashore in two boats which made the perilous trip through the darkness, and the Algie, an 80-foot oil burner, sank to the bottom of Shagwong Reef with about $75,000 worth of liquor, and a new problem for Coast Guard and diplomatic officials to work on.

The entire crew, whose names could not be ascertained either at Montauk Point or Coast Guard headquarters at New London, demanded their immediate release as S O S survivors. Their explanation was that they had not evaded patrol boats, but instead had purposely steamed to shore to save their own lives and not to unload the cargo.

Lieut. Comdr. Ryan, of New London, ordered the crew held and dispatched a patrol ship to stand by the foundering Algie, while another

Calvin Coolidge Says:

A movement appears to be starting to authorize agreements and practices now prohibited as restraints of trade. It is proposed to safeguard the public by having such measures approved by some national board.

One of the main arguments favoring this policy is conservation of natural resources. It is also an attempt to stabilize trade. Under this method production could be limited, sales territory divided among different concerns and prices determined. The real object is to regulate competition.

It may be that something of this nature would be an improvement over present conditions. All the burden is on its proponents to show this, for in general experience commerce has been most healthy under free and reasonable competition. If producers combine, consumers will combine. The danger is that opportunity will be greatly restricted and indirectly, if not directly, the Government board will have to fix prices.

Possibly we are moving in that direction. It is done in the case of public utilities. But because everybody is wiser than somebody, markets are no respecters of Government prices. It will be a wise board that can substitute its judgment for competition. We can only curb selfishness. No law can eliminate it.

City Menaced, Protected In Aerial Sham Maneuver

Practicability of Distant Movements of Complete Army Squadrons Under Cover of Darkness Is Proven First Time With Success.

Menaced momentarily by hypothetical enemy aircraft, Washington last night was protected from imaginary bombardment by nineteen Army planes rushed here from Selfridge Field, Mich., in an unheralded war-game maneuver proving for the first time the practicability of distant movements of complete Army air squadrons under cover of darkness.

The feat was accomplished when eighteen pursuit planes, forming the entire Seventeenth Army Air Squadron, attached to the first pursuit group stationed at the field at Detroit, and accompanied by a large trimotored transport craft, swept out of the night to a speedy landing at Bolling Field at 8:30 o'clock last night.

Exactly two and-half hours were required for the unit to negotiate the 425 miles lying along its route via Cleveland, Ohio, and Uniontown, Pa. This average speed of 170 miles an hour, due in part to a tail wind aiding from Cleveland here, was declared by fliers to have been a tremendous exploit.

Capt. Ross Hoyt, commanding officer of the squadron, declared that the flight was accomplished without mishap and demonstrated conclusively that squadrons can be moved at night from far distant points to protect any designated spot in the Nation in case of a threatened attack.

tered on determining whether a veto could be sustained.

Meanwhile Senate leaders will seek this week to hasten to the White House some of the stack of appropriation bills which piled up during the protracted row over drought relief.

Only one of the nine regular supply bills which must be enacted before the March 4 adjournment to prevent an extra session has gone through Congress and the White House.

Leaders' Strength Shown.

The strength of the Senate leaders to carry through a definite program was shown Saturday when the drought relief compromise, sponsored by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, was approved, 67 to 15. This same line-up is in prospect for a movement to pass the veterans' relief measure and to complete other necessary business before adjournment to avoid an extra session.

The new Congress will be almost evenly divided and the Republican Independents will have the balance of power in Senate and House. Whether this group will seek to force an extra meeting is undetermined.

With the support of President Hoover, Chairman Hale, of the Senate naval committee, today will ask the Senate to take up the $90,000,000 naval construction bill. However, leaders last night believed there was little or no chance for final enactment in the face of a drive for completion of the appropriation measures.

Longworth Revolt Spreads.

The revolt of Speaker Longworth against the administration's opposition to the veterans' bill has spread to the Senate Republican ranks. Senators Vandenberg and Couzens, both of Michigan, have disputed the Treasury Secretary's estimates of the cost of the legislation.

The House will take the bill up today under rules forbidding any amendment and requiring a two-thirds majority for passage.

More than enough votes to assure this are in prospect. The bill is sponsored by Representative Bacharach (Republican), New Jersey, who estimates the Treasury will not be called upon for much more than $700,000,000 at the outside for the legislation.

American Legion representatives have begun a drive in the Senate for enactment of the bill in the same form as it probably will pass the House today.

Little Chance for Others.

Aside from this bill, leaders believed there was little prospect for any other general legislation to be enacted in the remaining fourteen working days of this session. Proponents of an oil embargo and of the naval construction bills will wage campaigns in both branches, however.

Relieved by the final settlement on Saturday of the drought relief dispute, Senator Watson said yesterday "it looks like easier sailing." Nevertheless, it took the Senate a full week to approve the drought compromise with only fifteen votes in opposition.

There is still a prospect of a new attempt to get additional Federal relief funds, but no expectation was held that any move would be successful.

The Rogers $12,500,000 bill to expand the veterans' hospitalization facilities also is to be pushed through the House today.

JOSEPH P. COTTON HAS EYE REMOVED

CONDITION IS IMPROVED

The infected right eye of Joseph P. Cotton, Undersecretary of State, was excised at 11:30 a. m. yesterday by Dr. Allan C. Woods at the Wilmer Ophthalmological Institute of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

At the Marburg Building at the hospital, where Mr. Cotton has been a patient since last month, it was said last night that his condition was slightly improved and that his fever had receded somewhat.

The operation yesterday was the second Mr. Cotton had undergone since entering the hospital. On January 21 Dr. Walter E. Dandy, brain specialist, performed an operation, necessitated by the infection, of the spinal cord.

Lost Sight of Eye.

General signs of improvement were noticed after the operation, but shortly afterward blood poisoning set in, and the sight of the right eye was impaired until it was lost entirely. It was then decided that an operation should be performed which would result in the removal of the eye. Yesterday morning Mr. Cotton's condition was such that he could stand the rigors of another operation.

Since going to the Johns Hopkins Hospital Mr. Cotton has been under the care of Dr. Dandy. Mrs. Cotton, wife of the Undersecretary, and their daughter, Isabel, have taken rooms opposite the hospital on Broadway and are constantly at Mr. Cotton's side.

Mr. Cotton, who bore the brunt of the State Department's work during the absence of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson at the London Naval Conference a year ago, is 56 years old, and a New Yorker. He was appointed to his present post by President Hoover in May 1929, and was one of the group who worked with the President during his food administration work and later when he was Secretary of Commerce.

Began Law Practice.

A member of the firm of Cotton and Franklin, of New York, he is the director in a number of enterprises and for a time served as counsel for the Federal Reserve Board and the International Finance Council.

A graduate of Harvard College, class of 1898, he took his master's degree at the university in 1897 and graduated from the law school in 1900. He began practicing law the same year with the firm of Cravath, Henderson & De Gersdorff. He left this firm to form a law partnership which ultimately resulted in the present firm of which he is a member.

He served as counsel for the Alaskan Engineering Commission, New York State Commission on Workmen's Compensation and was European representative of the United States Food Administration in 1918. He is the editor of the Constitutional decisions of John Marshall. Mr. Cotton's New York address is 405 Park avenue.

Raid on Gangsters Nets 50 Prisoners

New Yorkers Believed to Have Invaded Monroe; Guns Seized.

Detroit, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Fifty men were arrested and weapons seized, including a machine gun, pistols and sawed-off shotguns, in a raid at Monroe, Mich., led by State police under Capt. Donald Leonard early today.

Officers said the raids were occasioned by the receipt of information that a New York "mob" had moved into Monroe and planned to "muscle in" on Detroit rackets while local gangs were quiet because of activities of the 22-man Wayne County grand jury.

The police seized an automobile which bore New York license plates.

Officers explained that since the slaying of Radio Announcer Gerald E. (Jerry) Buckley last July 23, Detroit had been considered an "unhealthy" place for hoodlums who are known to police here. Many of the gangsters have been arrested or driven from the city. Police believe that the New York "mob" planned to "move in and take over the business."

the most beautiful little creatures I ever set eyes on.

"With her in her first American appearances were three other women —a Danish girl, a German girl and Lillian's aunt. They were billed as 'the four Leamy ladies.' They performed an aerial act noted more for its grace and beauty than for its aerial thrills.

"Miss Leitzel was easily the queen of the circus world. In her veins flowed the blood of a line of circus performers. Her mother and her grandmother were performers.

"After she became a featured star in her own right, she was the uncrowned ruler of the circus lots. She had her own car, her own maids, and private dressing rooms. With it all, if there was ever any temperamental display she was always the first to help and sympathize with fellow performers in their troubles.

"Her first husband was Clyde Ingalls. Her marriage to Alfredo Cordona, who survives her, was a true love match of the sawdust circle.

"In late years Miss Leitzel had appeared much on the vaudeville stage in addition to her tours with Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circuses."

Fellowes said Miss Leitzel and her husband were together about Christmas time at the Nouveau Cirque in Paris and he received a card from them.

About a year ago, Fellowes said, Miss Leitzel—whose family name was Pelikan—and Cordona, who is popular with the Mexican public, attempted to finance a circus of their own on a tour of Mexico. It met with disastrous financial results. In Cordona's act, now appearing in Berlin, were his brother Joe and a young woman, Vera Bruce.

Miss Leitzel's brother, Alfred Pelikan, is art director of the public schools in Milwaukee, Fellowes said. "Miss Leitzel looked forward every year to her visits to Milwaukee," Fellowes said. "She always would load her automobile with presents for her niece, of whom she was very fond."

Avalanche Kills Man; 4 Rescued.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—One man lost his life and four others were rescued alive today after they were buried by an avalanche while skiing. A rescue party of ten persons hurried to the scene of the accident and uncovered the four men.

Police End Freethinkers' Session.

Nuremberg, Germany, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Police today forcibly closed a conference of the Proletarian Freethinkers Society, which was distributing propaganda for the Russian "godless" campaign. Propaganda material was seized. Members of the society were released later.

ZOO LION CUB IS MADE PET

The little 2-month-old lion cub at the zoo has been made a pet by the keepers there and has been raised on a bottle and kept in an office on an upper floor. The fact that he is quite tame is attested to by the three pretty girls who fondled him. Left to right—Misses Thelma Gross, Dorothy Driver and Dorothy Salmons.

DETERMINED DRIVE ON OIL IMPORTS SET

ACTION DUE THIS WEEK

(Associated Press.)

A determined drive will be waged this week by independent oil operators for legislation to limit oil importations.

Guided by the short time remaining, the independents will concentrate their major forces on the Capper-Garber bill to fix petroleum imports for the next three years at 16,000,000 barrels annually. This measure, already on the Senate calendar, is in the last stages of hearings before the House ways and means committee.

In two other quarters the campaign will go forward. Before the rules committee an effort will be made to obtain action on the Hoch resolution for a thorough investigation of the entire oil industry, including observance of the decree which dissolved the old Standard Oil group. This inquiry has the support of Democratic Leader Garner.

The House Commerce committee will begin consideration tomorrow of the Hoch bill to divorce pipe lines and interstate carriers from the major oil companies and define them as common carriers for regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Several independent witnesses have indorsed this bill before the ways and means committee.

Representative Garbeer (Republican), Oklahoma, House sponsor of the oil restriction measure, said last night advocates would close their case this morning so the opposition could begin testimony in the afternoon.

Chairman Hawley expects to close the hearings tomorrow night, if possible, to make way for a grain embargo bill.

MAKE TARIFF ISSUE, HULL URGES PARTY

Present Policy Is Attacked by Former Democratic Committee Head.

FORMAL DEMAND MADE

(Associated Press.)

The Democratic party was called upon yesterday by Representative Cordell Hull to place economic problems, including the tariff and commercial policy, first on its program for the next two years.

The Tennessee senator-elect, and former chairman of the Democratic national committee, issued a formal statement asserting "high tariff walls here and everywhere have constituted the greatest single underlying cause of the present world economic collapse."

Reviewing trade, unemployment and other conditions, Mr. Hull demanded "a reexamination of our tariff rate structure with the view to its readjustment to a decent level."

"Republican economic philosophy is steeped in the most aggravated forms of special privilege or governmental favoritism," he insisted. "There must be more than mere hair-splitting difference between the two political parties on tariff and commercial policy."

"It is astonishing to observe that the value of the exports from 28 countries of Europe with 250,000,000 consumers was $11,985,000,000 for the calendar year 1929," he added, "compared with $12,086,000,000 for the year 1913, with the 1929 commerce adjusted to the value of the 1913 dollar."

The Tennesseean said "The best remedy for unemployment" was for a nation to sell its surplus.

"We are impregnable in our domestic market under any moderate or reasonably competitive tariff policy," he added.

Mr. Hull said "The blind and selfish forces of economic isolation" enacted the Hawley-Smoot tariff "chiefly for the benefit of antiquated or overcapitalized or other inefficient industries."

RUM VESSEL SINKS; SAILORS SAVED, HELD

boat was to take the men to the customs house in New York for a preliminary hearing tomorrow.

The Algie, according to Coast Guard officials, has been on the suspected list of the patrols for some time. Commander Ryan today charged that the ship had evidently escaped the patrol cordon during the night and was headed for Fort Pon Bay, a favorite dumping place, where she expected to unload. They further claim that she missed her course, punctured her hold on a jutting reef and drew water so rapidly that her captain thought it prudent to ask for aid and risk capture.

The ship was partly tilted when the Dutch Plains crew arrived at the shore and, because she was drawing water very rapidly, Boatswain Warner ordered a boat launched to take the crew off. Another lifeboat was launched from the Algie's deck and the crew was brought ashore under guard. A special shore patrol was left to keep the liquor intact pending the investigation of Coast Guard officials.

Although the Algie went down within the 12-mile limit and is therefore running the risk of seizure, the explanation that she purposely steamed to shore to save the men aboard somewhat alters the case. The fact that she carried a load of liquor and meant to stay 12 miles out or more would mean that Coast Guardsmen were powerless to stop her.

Labor Situation Reported Better

(Associated Press.)

A slight improvement in the industrial employment situation in January was announced yesterday by the Labor Department. Through its monthly employment bulletin, it was said, further improvement could be expected in the next few weeks.

"There was a noticeable increase in production and employment in the iron and steel industry," the bulletin said. "Many orders were received for railroad equipment, automobile requirements, pipe and structural materials. There has been an encouraging increase in activity in the automobile industry since January 1.

"Operations generally in radio manufacturing establishments remain curtailed; however, several plants reopened. Activities in shipbuilding yards were regarded as satisfactory. Large surpluses of skilled and unskilled laborers were apparent in most States as January drew to a close."

Lord Melchett's Estate Valued at $2,500,000

London, Feb. 15 (A. P.).—The Daily Express today said Lord Melchett of Lindford, British industrialist and Zionist leader, who died December 27, left an estate of approximately $2,500,000. This was considerably less than had been forecast.

When her attention was called to the matter, Lady Melchett said the statement regarding her husband's will was "absolutely unauthorized." She added that she, as well as everyone else, was ignorant of its contents.

Queen Helen Nips Pneumonia Threat

Condition Much Better, but Sister-in-Law Now Has Measles.

Bucharest, Roumania, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Queen Helen apparently had conquered a threatened attack of pneumonia today, but a new name was added to the royal sick list, for Queen Marie of Jugoslavia, sister of Carol and sister-in-law of Queen Helen, was down with the measles.

Queen Helen, divorced wife of King Carol, was dangerously near pneumonia last night after an illness of several days with influenza, and had a high temperature. This morning her physicians announced she was much better and tonight said her temperature had returned to normal.

Last night Queen Marie's temperature stood at 100.2 degrees. Tonight her physicians said the Jugoslavian Queen had developed an inflammation of the trachea, accompanied by bronchitis and a rose rash with temperature, and a little later it was pronounced measles.

New Hungarian Attache Reported Coming Here

Budapest, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Maj. Marcel Stomm today was gazetted military attache to the Hungarian legations in London and Washington.

The Hungarian Legation had received no notification of the appointment of Maj. Stomm last night. Lieut. Col. S. A. Beldy, the present military attache, is in London and no report has been made of his replacement, it was said here. Officials at the Hungarian Legation said that it is quite possible that a new appointment has been made, as attaches are transferred every two or three years. Definite information is expected today.

Injuries Are Fatal.

Mr. Coogan was extricated and taken to Casualty Hospital. He was treated there for severe internal injuries, from which he later died. Small was detained at the Fifth Precinct police station for the coroner's inquest, which will be held at the Morgue this morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Mary Schwartz, 84 years old, of 457 I street southwest, died yesterday afternoon at the Sacred Heart Home, Hyattsville, Md., of complications arising from injuries she sustained February 1 in an automobile accident at Sixth and I streets southwest.

Driver Arrested.

At the time of the accident, Mrs. Schwartz was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for shock. Later she was removed to her home, and when she failed to rally was taken to the Sacred Heart Home for convalescence. Because of her advanced age she was unable to overcome the shock her nervous syste msuffered in the accident. An inquest will beheld at the Morgue at 11:30 this morning.

Mrs. Schwartz was riding in an automobile operated by Mrs. Cora Rowan, of V street, near Second street northeast, when an automobile driven by Thomas Maynard Simmons, 21 years old, of F street, near Fourth street southwest, crashde into it. Simmons was arrested last night and is being technically held pending the outcome of the coroner's decision today.

Five-year-old Warren Leule, of Lincoln road northeast near S street, was critically injured when struck in front of his home by an automobile operated by Albert Smith, 22 years old, of Eighth street northwest, near Gallatin street.

Smith placed the child in his car and speeded to Garfield Hospital. There it was discovered that the boy's left leg was fractured and that he had a possible fractured skull. Smith was not held by police. It was said that the boy ran out unexpectedly from between two parked cars.

CHICAGO DRUG RAID IS CALLED BLUNDER

WOMAN CHARGES ENMITY

Chicago, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Raids by a Government narcotic detail from Washington on the gold coast apartments of a Canadian millionaire barrister and an American heiress brought the statement today from counsel for the principals that the whole affair was "a blunder."

It was admitted that Federal agents, cooperating with authorities of Canada in tracing the ramifications of a dope smuggling ring, had invaded the apartments of W. Perkins Bull, K. C., of Toronto and London, and Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley, heir to the fortune of William H. Horlick, American malted milk manufacturer.

They were questioned for six hours at the Federal district attorney's office by the agents, who had been at work more than a month on the case. Likewise J. J. Harrison, head of a private detective agency, and his wife, were summoned to the inquiry.

Private Papers Impounded.

The narcotic detail was believed today to have returned to Washington. Local officials of the Government said they knew nothing of the raids, and the impounding of private papers belonging to Bull and Mrs. Sidley. It was understood that an assistant attorney general of the United States had come here to direct the investigation.

John E. Kehoe, described by Bull as his counsel, said he was informed the Government had "mistakenly" thought a secret code in use between Bull and Mrs. Sidley was somehow connected with the inquiry into smuggling. This code, he said, really was to convey private messages involving the pending suit for divorce of Mrs. Sidley against Dr. John Streeter Sidley, of Racine, Wis., her husband. Bull, he said, was handling the suit for Mrs. Sidley.

"Some sort of malicious enmity," Kehoe said, "is behind this. There is absolutely no basis for the seizure of Mr. Bull or his papers. The Federal authorities gained nothing by the raid."

Jules Brower, attorney for Harrison, said an apology had been made.

"It was a mistake," he said. "It was prompted by rather vicious interests working against us."

A month ago, Dr. John Streeter Sidley, of Racine, husband of the heiress, filed a damage suit against Bull. He asked $250,000 damages and charged that Bull and the Harrisons had harassed him by having him continuously shadowed. He declared that he was unable to account for the interest which Bull had taken in his movements.

Later Dr. Sidley sought an injunction to compel Bull to call the detectives off. Hearing on the petition for it is pending.

Mrs. Sidley has not pressed her divorce suit, which was filed in Racine, where her husband until a year ago was treasurer of the Horlick Co. He complained that the shadowing by agents of Bull so undermined his health that he was forced to relinquish the post.

Speaking for Bull, Attorney Kehoe said:

"Mr. Bull assures me that the Federal agents gained nothing by the raid. They discovered not a single particle of incriminating evidence against him. Nor were they able to confront him with any suspicious circumstances or acts of his.

Origin of Raid Not Fixed.

"They arrived, searched his suite and took him away without any warrant. He was led to understand that he was in the hands of Department of Justice agents who were on the trail of a dope-smuggling group.

"It is ridiculous to associate Mr. Bull with any such organization. His interests are largely in sugar plantations."

The origin of the narcotic investigation was not definitely fixed.

Mrs. Sidley was reported to be at the home of her parents in Racine. Efforts to reach her for comment were unavailing.

(Associated Press.)

Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger, of the Narcotics Bureau, said last night he knew nothing of the circumstances surrounding the raid by Federal agents in Chicago on the apartments of W. Perkins Bull and Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley.

He added he understood an investigation had been undertaken at the instance of the United States attorney in that city. No report on the raids had reached him, but he assumed if they concerned narcotics it would reach his office "in due course."

Justice Department officials disclaimed any knowledge of the case.

Woman Overcome By Gas Is Revived

Policeman Breaks Into Room and Renders First Aid, Saving Life.

Overcome by gas escaping from a defective stove in the bedroom of her apartment at 61 Rhode Island avenue northeast yesterday afternoon, Miss Elsie L. Frances, 25 years old, was given first aid treatment by members of the Fire Rescue Squad. They were summoned by Policeman S. H. Hartung, of the Eighth Precinct, whose quick action was instrumental in saving the woman's life.

Answering a call from tenants in the building who smelled the gas, Hartung traced the odor to Miss Frances' apartment only to find the door securely bolted. After calling the rescue squad he returned to the apartment and, breaking in the door, found Miss Frances in an unconscious condition in her gas-filled bedroom. She was later revived and last night declared that she suffered no ill effects from the experience.

She was taken to the House of Detention and after questioning was released.

He said the squadron flew in usual "V" formation, using only ordinary running lights, and that they purposely flew over a route not provided for with helpful radio beacons. They flew the greater part of the way at 5,000 feet.

He said the 19 planes, including as many pilots and six mechanics carried in the transport, will hop off at 3 o'clock this afternoon for Middletown, Pa., to refuel before setting off from that point at dark on a return training flight. The route will lie by Bellefonte, Pa., Cleveland, and Toledo to Detroit.

AMBASSADOR LAUDS CUBA AS MONUMENT

COUNTRY'S STRIDE CITED

Cuba stands today a living monument to the victims of the battleship Maine, Ambassador Orestes Ferrera, of the island republic, told a large crowd assembled yesterday afternoon at Fort Myer to pay homage to the 266 men who lost their lives in the disaster, exactly 33 years ago.

The anniversary exercises, held in the riding hall of the Army reservation, featured also as principal speakers both Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, like the ambassador, a veteran of the war acutely precipitated by the Maine explosion, and Judge Edward S. Mathias, of Columbus, Ohio, commander in chief of the United Spanish War Veterans, hosts of the occasion.

The services followed a brief demonstration by the Ladies Auxiliary of the United States Spanish War Veterans at the Maine Mast in Arlington Cemetery, where the memorial shaft was decorated with a wreath sent by President Hoover, laid by Lieut. H. B. Hudson, a White House naval aid; a wreath of the Cuban Embassy, laid by Jose A. Sera, a Cuban attache, among other floral remembrances.

Ambassador Ferrara, after tracing the remarkable growth of Cuba since the war and listing many world accomplishments in which its representatives had figured prominently, declared that his summary was "enough to convince any thinking person that the results of that intervention by the United States 33 years ago have more than justified expectation."

"It must be realized that progress of this kind has not been made without some exception being taken to the methods employed," he said. "No nation is beyond the bounds of criticism however successful or praiseworthy its efforts may be. It must be recognized that we are still in a process of evolution. We are, however, not ashamed of our present situation as your forfathers were not ashamed of their's 33 years after the Declaration of Independence. On the contrary, we are inclined to think that we have progressed far beyond reasonable anticipation. As a small nation we are subject to the attacks of those ultraradicals and ultraconservative elements, both of which are prevalent in the world today. Our horizon is clear and we distinctly perceive our rights and our duties."

Senator Brookhart urged his audience to remember the Maine, "not as a slogan of war or hatred, but as a beacon of the liberty and peace of the world."

"Americans do not believe in war for war's sake, and we have now outlawed war as a means of international arbitrament," he stated. "We have outlawed war by solemn treaty. It is not yet effective, but the die is cast, and the hope arises that the World War may yet end war. Beside this great idea history will place the name of Woodrow Wilson.

"From the first American sympathy went out for Cuba Libre. When the Maine went down the impulse became irresistible and we decided to drive the last king from the American continent. This is a prophetic forerunner of the greatest act of Woodrow Wilson when from the White House in chief command of the American Army he drove the kaiser from his throne for the freedom of Germany and the democracy of the world."

Judge Matthias warned against insidious influences as the nation's only danger today. In lauding Cuba, he asserted that "we greet Cuba as a sister republic in whose continued welfare and prosperity America shall ever maintain the most active and friendly interest."

John Lewis Smith, past commander in chief of the veterans, acted as master of ceremonies. The program also included selections by the Marine Band, vocal numbers by Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer and Miss Jeannette McCaffret.

A call to order was by Benjamin F. Motley, department commander of the veterans here; benediction by Samuel G. Mawson, department chaplain of the veterans of the District, and innovation by Chaplain Ralph C. Riebert, of the Army. Detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines stood at duty throughout the ceremonies.

Residents in Peru Flee City Flooded by Rivers

Lima, Peru, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—El Comercio's correspondent in Sandia in southern Peru today said inhabitants had become panic stricken and fled from the town after swollen rivers had overflowed and flooded the region, doing considerable damage.

Those who left the town are living in the open fields, the dispatch said. Sandia's market, prison building and city hall were reported destroyed by the floods. No casualties were mentioned.

INDIAN RESISTANCE MOVE FLARES AGAIN

PARADERS ARE INJURED

New Delhi, India, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—While unofficial reports here today were that Mahatma Gandhi and Viceroy Lord Irwin would meet on Wednesday in a conference that may mean much to troubled India, word came from Surat of a recrudescence of the civil disobedience movement in the Juperat District. That is the district in which Gandhi began his civil resistance campaign a year ago March 12.

Congress adherents were said to have seized 600 maunds of salt (about 21 tons) from the government salt pans, just as in the raids which were made by Congress adherents most of last summer.

Benares reported that armed police still were patrolling the disturbed areas in India's Holy City, where serious communal tension still prevails following rioting between Hindus and Mohammedans Friday. At that time one Hindu and one Mohammedan were killed and 50 others were seriously injured after Moslems demanded that Hindus should close their stores during the funeral of a Moslem merchant, who allegedly was killed by Hindu Nationalist volunteers because he sold foreign cloth.

Today a procession of Hindus and Moslems, led by leaders of the two communities in order to restore good feeling, was attacked by a group of die-hard Moslems and some of the paraders were injured. This started the trouble all over again and more than twenty houses were looted in one district, while in another a Moslem father, mother and baby were stabbed to death.

Shops remained closed, with normal work suspended and postal activities halted.

Gandhi announced at Allahabad yesterday he had written to Lord Irwin and asked an opportunity of discussing the entire Indian situation with him. Today the letter was delivered to the viceroy by Rafiuddin Kidwai, a former member of the legislative assembly.

Kidwai returned to Allahabad without a reply, which he stated, would be sent to Gandhi by telegraph, but it was understood this answer would set the date next Wednesday.

Hunt for Missing Girl Is Fruitless

Excitement High as Fears of Kidnaping and Murder Are Expressed.

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Police and private citizens, aided by approximately 200 Boy Scouts, searched canyons and byways without success today for 10-year-old Virginia Brooks, missing from her home here since Wednesday morning.

The searchers spread out fanwise, and Balboa Park, San Diego's playground and one of the largest city-owned parks in southern California, was the objective of many of the volunteers.

Excitement was running high. Speculation was rife as to whether the little girl had been kidnaped and murdered or whether she simply had decided to run away. Detectives lean to the theory the girl has fallen into the hands of a kidnaper and are investigating the possibility she has been slain and her body hidden. They said the parents have recevied no ransom letter.

6 SHIPS IN DISTRESS AS STORM IS SPENT

Three Beached, One Sunk and Others Damaged in Saturday Gale.

RELIEF CRAFT STAND BY

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The northwest storm that brought grief to half a dozen ships in the vicinity of Hampton Roads early yesterday had blown itself out today. Three ships that were beached remained ashore, and the crew of the Beauty St. Joseph, fishing smack, which was sunk off Cape Henry last night, was brought ashore.

The Fort Armstrong, Nelson Line steamer, was still hard aground near Cape Lookout, with the Coast Guard cutter Carrabasisette standing by with a line aboard to make a second attempt early tonight to float her. She was only slightly damage. The trawler Salvator was still aground near Dam Neck, badly battered by the seas, but probably still worth saving.

The cutter Mascoutin was standing by. The Mallemax, Mallory Line steamer, was still on Rock Landing Shoals in the James River and the Coast Guard were said they had not been asked for aid.

The Oritani, Oriental Navigation Co. steamer, which was reported helpless 150 miles off Cape Fear, was reported during the day to be making headway under her own power toward Hatteras at the rate of 6 knots an hour. The cutter Mendotta was expected to make contact with her early tonight and the Modoc, which left Wilmington, N. C., this morning to meet her, subsequently was ordered to sail to the assistance of the Fort Armstrong.

Coast Guard patrol boat No. 200, which went aground on Hog Island, was floated last night and was en route to Norfolk only slightly damaged.

The Beauty St. Joseph's crew reported that the craft had been badly damaged as the result of running into a buoy off Cape Henry. The buoy, it was said, was not lighted. The impact crushed the stem of the craft, and it sank rapidly after the smacks Josephine and Margaret and Josephine and Mary had removed her crew of nine, all of Gloucester, Mass.

Cumberland Resident Dies of Heart Attack

Drive on Firemen's Followers Opens

County Police Inaugurate Campaign, Arresting One as Suspect.

Montgomery County police yesterday inaugurated a campaign against motorists who follow fire engines, when they arrested Daniel J. Murphy, of Thirty-second street northwest, near Cathedral avenue.

Murphy was stopped by Policeman James McAuliffe. He was said to have been trailing the Bethesda volunteer firemen, who were en route to a small blaze on Conduit road. Haled before Justice of the Peace A. L. Moore, of Bethesda, Murphy was charged with speeding and violating the State motor vehicle regulation, which prohibits automobilists from following fire apparatus closer than 600 feet.

Murphy was released on collateral for his appearance in Police Court this morning.

Mrs. Doak's Death Now Feared Near

Doctors Greatly Concerned Over Secretary's Mother; Hoovers Send Roses.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Mrs. Elizabeth Doak, 86, ill for a week from pneumonia, was in an extremely low condition tonight and doctors said they did not expect her to live much longer. Her son, William N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, was advised of her condition, and his sister, Mrs. D. F. McCarty, expects him and Mrs. Doak here tomorrow morning.

Mr. Doak has called daily from Washington to keep in touch with his mother's condition. Another son, E. S. Doak, of Detroit, also has called.

President and Mrs. Hoover sent Mrs. Doak cut roses and carnations today.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

DIARY OF A MAN NOT GOING SOUTH THIS WINTER.

ENTRY about October 15—Come what may this winter I have definitely decided that I will not take a vacation in Florida. Business is bad and even if I could personally afford the trip I could not conscientiously make it while realizing so many people are destitute. I am resolved to stick close to the job and make it a winter of real accomplishment.

• • • •

Entry about a month later—It is quite cold today. Weather has been disagreeable generally. I detest this climate in winter, but if I keep busy the cold months will pass quickly. If I go away at all it will be only for a week at the most, to some nearby resort.

• • • •

Entry about December 1—We are having abominable weather. I have had a bad cold for several days. Do not seem able to shake it off. Eddie Deemish and Walt Chambers are leaving the middle of the month for St. Augustine. They are trying to get me to go along, but I am going to get through this winter without it, unless my health really demands it.

• • • •

Entry around Christmas—The flu is everywhere. Everybody I know is down with it. I don't feel so well myself. Have a cough and that all-gone feeling. Got some post cards from the Van Wimps at Daytona Beach. They have a place there for the season. I miss Florida, but am determined not to go there this season, things being as they are in business.

• • • •

ABOUT January 10—The town is plastered with warnings about flu and pneumonia. Think I have some of the symptoms. Think I may take a week in Asheville or Augusta, if I don't feel better.

• • • •

January 25—Lots of snow and slush. The doctors are warning the public against colds. They say exhaustion is one of the causes of flu. Think I am working too hard. A trip to some place like Charleston for about ten days might be a good idea.

• • • •

February 1—Papers say flu epidemic gained 22 per cent last week. May run down to Daytona Beach for a couple of weeks.

• • • •

February 3—Stopped in at railroad office for Florida folders today. Hear that Jimmy Gates is quite sick. Doctors say it is due to overwork.

• • • •

February 4—Leaving tomorrow for Key West for two months. After all, there is such a thing as taking work too seriously.

PIPE DREAMS.

LAST night I did some shopping
Upon a busy street;
I had no trouble parking—
Good gracious, what a treat!

While forty thousand others
Were racing for the place,
A cop held up the traffic
While I slipped in the space.

I scraped somebody's mudguard
While working myself in.
The owner merely chortled,
"It's just a piece of tin."

I then went to an auction
And listened half the night,
And when they closed the place up
My car was still in sight.

A friendly cop stood near it
And did his best to hide
The fact I'd picked a hydrant
To park my car beside.

FIRE CHIEF AND AID HURT IN AUTO CRASH

VICTIMS TREATED IN CITY

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

Chief Edward M. Ward and Robert Copeland, of the Falls Church Volunteer Fire Department, were slightly injured yesterday morning when the fire engine collided with a car while responding to an alarm. The alarm had been turned in for a brush fire on Lincoln avenue, in West Falls Church.

The fire truck, driven by Joseph Birch, entered Lincoln avenue from the west end, and Moyer Copeland and his brother, Robert, entered from the east end of the street. Both were firemen. Plowing through the dense smoke from the fire, the machines hit head-on, throwing Chief Ward from the truck and injuring him about the shoulders. Mr. Copeland was thrown through the windshield of his brother's car, cutting him about the head and shoulders.

Both men were rushed to the Georgetown Hospital in Washington for treatment, and were able to return to their homes that afternoon.

Thieves using duplicate keys entered the gasoline filling station of A. W. McPherson, on Washington street, in Falls Church, some time early yesterday morning and stole approximately $100 worth of merchandise and a revolver.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church at Vienna has elected Mrs. Harry Blake as president. Other officers elected include Mrs. William D. Denham, vice president; Mrs. Samuel Bauer, second vice president; Mrs. Frank Fouche, third vice president; Mrs. Joseph Berry, secretary, and Mrs. George Miles, treasurer.

At the meeting of the stockholders of the Great Falls Grange Hall Building Corporation the following directors were elected for the year: D. D. Cornwell, William Walker, Marvin Saunders, John W. Preston, L. B. Morris, A. C. Speight, Mark Turner, F. O. Hicks, J. R. Shory, O. K. Miller, O. V. Carper and Albert Schmidt. The treasurer reported that $1,000 had been paid on the indebtedness for the hall since the 1930 meeting.

The Young Peoples' Missionary Society of Andrew Chapel will hold its meeting this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Oliver.

Accotink Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F. will hold an initiatory meeting this evening for five candidates.

The regular meeting of the Merrifield Community League will be held this evening in the Merrifield Community Hall. The Valentine party and house-warming planned for this evening has been postponed until a later date.

The Sharon Chapter, Order of Eastern Star at McLean, will hold its meeting this evening in the Masonic Temple at McLean. The members are distributing tickets for the card party to be given next Monday evening in the Masonic Hall for the benefit of the Red Cross.

The Women's Auxiliary of the St. Mary's Episcopal Church at McLean will be held this morning at 11:30 o'clock in the Parish Hall. Mrs. Bland Tucker, of Washington, will address the meeting on the united thank-offering boxes. The Ladies' Guild will follow at 2 o'clock.

The Northwest Citizens Association, of Falls Church, will hold its meeting this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Brandon. Plans will be made for insuring the participation of the citizens of the town in the water bond issue election among the freehold resident real property owners. They plan to see that a sufficient number of persons vote to secure a valid election.

The Fairfax Parent-Teacher Association will hold its meeting today in the auditorium of the Fairfax School. Mrs. W. T. Woodson, chairman of the program committee, has made special plans for the association's work for the year. Those assisting Mrs. Woodson are Mrs. Willie Tanner, Mrs. James U. Kincheloe and Mrs. R. J. White.

Mrs. Essie Moon and Mrs. J. D. Davis, local leaders of the 4-H Club at Burke, will give a demonstration of the preparation of specail potato dishes at the meeting of the club tomorrow.

The Farmers and Mechanics Council, Order of Fraternal Americans, will hold its meeting tomorrow evening in the auditorium of the Andrew Chapel Schoolhouse. The council plans to send a delegation to attend the district meeting Thursday evening at Herndon.

DR. JOHN P. BRISCOE, PEDIATRIST, IS DEAD

Brief Illness Proves Fatal to Graduate of Georgetown and St. John's.

BORN IN CALVERT COUNTY

Dr. John P. Briscoe, of 2701 Connecticut avenue, one of the leading pediatrists in Washington, died early yesterday morning at Garfield Hospital after a brief illness of pneumonia. Dr. Briscoe was 51 years of age, and had been a resident of the Capital for about 27 years.

He was born in Calvert County, Md., September 2, 1880, and was the son of the late Judge John P. Briscoe and Mrs. Katherine Bowen Briscoe. His father was chief judge of the Seventh judicial district of Maryland at Annapolis, and his family has long been prominent in Calvert County.

Dr. Briscoe was graduated from St. John's College in Annapolis, and from Georgetown University in 1905. He served his interneship at Providence Hospital and began practice here, specializing in the diseases of children in 1907. He had practiced continuously in Washington from that time.

Y., he is survived by a daughter, Frances Thomas Briscoe; his mother, Mrs. Katherine Bower Briscoe, of Baltimore; three sisters, Mrs. William S. Pye, Miss Catherine M. Briscoe and Mrs. Forney M. Knox; two brothers, W. Norwood Briscoe and Philander Briscoe, of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Massachusetts and Wisconsin avenues northwest, and interment will be at Prince Frederick, Calvert County, Md.

Seatle Veterans Near Capital Goal

15 Left in Party Seeking Aid for Disabled Service Men.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 15.—Fifteen World War veterans, from 35 to 50 years of age, and 20 per cent or more disabled, from Seattle, Wash., arrived here today on their way to Washington, by car route. They are seeking a Federal appropriation of $10,000,000 for service men discharged from hospitals. A party of 127 left Seattle three weeks ago, 50 of whom were sent home within three days while 19 found employment enroute and others stopped at the homes of relatives. All of the men have been in hospitals are out of employment and depended upon gifts of food since leaving Seattle.

Robert E. Taylor, spokesman said they will appeal to U. S. Senators Dill, of Washington; Wheeler, of Montana, and Representative Patman, of Texas, in the interest of the legislation they seek. In Brunswick the delegation stopped at the railroad Y. M. C. A. Food and cigaretts were provided by the Brunswick American Legion. The men were without funds and left for Washington, 50 miles away, on a freight train.

Petersburg Names New Fair Officers

Association Holds First Annual Meeting; Races and Show Planned.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 15.—The first annual meeting of the Petersburg Fair Association was held last night and officers were elected for the current year. N. B. Munson, an attorney, was elected president; Edward Eigenbrun, first vice president; E. B. J. Whitmore, second vice president; George W. Harrison, treasurer; R. Willard Eanes and J. J. Nelms, race secretaries; Morris R. Lyons and C. F. Lauterbach, assistant managers. A board of directors, which when completed will number about 80, will be representative of the fourteen counties near and surrounding Petersburg and the City of Hopewell.

Arrangements are being made for one of the largest and best fairs ever held here, and the races are to be one of the principal features of the exposition.

Cut Feed Loans To Be Protested

Virginians Coming Here Today to Lodge Formal Complaint.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 15.—The shaving down by Federal drought relief authorities of the amounts of feed and seed loans, as applied for Virginia farmers, will bring formal protest from the Virginia Drought Relief Commission, it was learned today.

Chairman Byrd, of that agency, and several members of county drought relief commissions will go to Washington tomorrow to make the protest.

Complaints have been filed with the State and county committees that many of these loans, which have been approved by the committees set up in the counties to pass upon them for the Federal authorities, have been reduced when the checks for the loans arrive from Washington. In some cases, it is said, the amount of the loan is not sufficient to cover the seed and fertilizer bills and to care for the work horses.

JACOB'S STORY TOLD TO REVEAL TRAGEDY OF WASTED CHANCES

Rev. George W. Cooke, D.D., Is Speaker at Petworth Methodist Church.

YEARS DO NOT GAUGE WORTHINESS OF LIFE

Father of Joseph, 130, Said: "Few and Evil Have Been My Days."

The tragedy of wasted time was emphasized yesterday by the Rev. George W. Cooke, D. D., who has been conducting a revival at the Petworth Methodist Church for several weeks for the pastor, the Rev. Robert Louis Wood. Dr. Cook took the story of Jacob to illustrate his point.

Time lost means lost opportunity, the minister said, and it was the realization of this waste, which nearly broke Jacob's heart. His text was "How old art thou?" Genesis xlvii:8.

Dr. Cooke's sermon in part follows:

"Three of the most important men of the world's history were together. Pharaoh was theking of mighty Egypt, and to know more about this marvelous civilization the world is pouring millions of dollars into the earth along the Nile River to uncover ancient cities and to reveal man's art of centuries ago.

Joseph in Group.

"Jacob was there, too, the father of the twelve sons who headed the tribes of Israel. The third of the group was Joseph, whose matchless character marks him as one of the world's most remarkable men. He so impressed himself upon his age that by sheer ability he became second only to Pharaoh himself in the command of affairs of the great Egyptian Empire.

"A terrible famine had spread throughout the world, and by the remarkable insight of Joseph, ample provision had been made in Egypt to meet it. With plenty in Egypt, people came from other parts of the world for food and among the solicitors were Joseph's brothers. Later it was arranged for the old father to take up residence with his highly successful son. Pharaoh told Joseph to bring his father in to see him and the three sat together.

"Jacob must have looked older than his years, for they had hardly been introduced when the king blurted out, 'How old art thou?' The old man replied, 'The days of the years of my pilgrimage are 130; few and evil have the days of the years of my life been.' They were bitter words!

Had Not Lived Fully.

"Jacob's confession to Pharaoh was that he hadn't lived all the years of his life. His pilgrimage in life had been 130 years, but to tell the years he had actually lived you must apply the rule of minds. 'Few and evil have been my days.' The old man was expressing the thing deep in his soul. It was his tragedy. 'I have been in existence 130 years, but that does not express the time I have lived.'

"He remembered the days he had wasted with his uncle Laban and then the 10 years he had thrown away at Sheckem. He also remembered the duplicity of his ways, and with all he had the consciousness that his life was not represented in the years he had been upon the earth.

"He now realized that to live you must give yourself to something worthwhile in God's world. And then to live you must live for something that is above the ordinary. And that real living is an approach to the high and noble. In brief, it is to live in and for and to. Poor Jacob had lived mostly in sin, and for the gratification of the flesh, and to nothing.

Need More Than Years.

"Jacob was telling the king in so many words that life is not the number of years you live, but that which you put into the years. 'The years of my life are 130,' but 'I have not attained unto the days of the years of my fathers.' It was his confession of defeat and wasted time.

"He remembered the usefulness of his father, Isaac, and the relation of his grandfather, Abraham, to his God, and by comparison his life was pretty much nil. Yes, and wasted time is not counted in a life. And when I ask How old are you? remember it means how many years have you actually lived. A man without purpose can not live. And without responsibility you are not in life—it is merely an existence, and that gets you nowhere.

"The tragedy was that Jacob had wasted so much time. Time is for character making. Time lost means lost opportunity. It was this that came nigh to breaking Jacob's heart. While his life brought utter regret in the matter of wasted time, the seriousness of it all was accentuated by the realization that his character was short.

Life Was Empty.

"'Time is gone and my life is empty,' he said. He was faced with the eternal fact that character has a destiny. His approach was terrible. Then, he also realized that he had broken the perpetuity of the holiness of his fathers. They were so many years old, plus. His life was 130 years, minus. If you are living for things you will dirty your hands, but really live, and will come to the climax and glory of life with a Christian character.

"'How old are you?' Let me know how you use your time. Let me know what you have in moral and spiritual perspective. Let me know your conversation, and your attitude toward mankind.

"The greatest thing in this world is not to make a million, but to live! You can make a million and come to the same bitter end as Jacob.

"The world can't see your dreams, pard,
Can't see them soar and mount;
They're big things to you, and it may seem hard,
But just what you do will count."

10,000 'Remember Maine' At Celebration in Cuba

Crowds Gather About Shaft to Famous Battleship to Honor 33d Anniversary of Its Sinking and Renew Pledges in Cause of Liberty.

Havana, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The Maine was "remembered" today as 10,000 persons thronged around the double-shafted monument erected in memory of the disaster to mark the thirty-third anniversary of the sinking of the battleship.

A mile-long procession paraded past the shaft as bands played American and Cuban patriotic music. Cuban army planes soared overhead during the ceremony, in which President Machado and American Ambassador Harry F. Guggenheim participated. The principal speaker was Dr. Francisco Maria Fernandez, secretary of state.

Mr. Guggenheim made a short address in Spanish in answer to Dr. Fernandez, who pledged the loyalty of the people of Cuba to the cause of liberty. Special precautions had been taken to avert any disorders and the celebration passed off peacefully.

The Maine monument was banked with flowers sent from the president, the American Ambassador, city officials and various patriotic organizations, including the daughters of the American Revolution, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, United Spanish War Veterans and the American Legion.

"Cuba trembles when it recalls those valiant, gallant men of the Maine," Dr. Fernandez said in his address. "It can not forget the American Army and Navy, nor Roosevelt, bringing to these shores a brilliant contingent of youth of his country to fight for our independence and to combat by force of arms for those same principles and for the same cause that the Cuban army for three years had been shedding its blood.

"Fighters of the North, that your great sacrifice may live always in the hearts of a thankful people, our respective nations should pledge themselves to an alliance of heartfelt cordiality.

"Rest assured that if your country may need them, that if the United States deems necessary, once more our beings and belongings, that in whatever crisis of your Nation, we may be able to offer our sincere and willing assistance, the people of Cuba will come to the foot of this monument and, as one, with all sincerity and devotion, reaffirm to you its noble proposition to be always at the side of the defenders of the cause of liberty."

Taxi Driver Foils Two Holdup Men

Menaced With Gun as Cash Is Demanded, He Beats One; Bullets Miss.

As two colored passengers early yesterday morning attempted to hold him up with a pistol at Division avenue and Jay street, Fred Carmichael, of Pennsylvania avenue northwest, near Twenty-ninth street, a taxi driver, struck one of them with his fist nd drove off, followed by a fusillade of shots.

He told the police the two had hailed his cab at Twenty-fourth and K streets northwest and asked to be driven to the Northeast address, arriving there, they alighted from the cab and one brandished a pistol, demanding money.

Carmichael hit him. As he drove off, the man fired thre times at him but the bullets went wild.

Open Forum Hears Talk on Vivisection

League Secretary, Against Practice, Describes Fight for District Bill.

The fight against vivisection in the District was described yesterday by Miss Mabel E. Orgelman, secretary of the Anti-Vivisection Investigation League at the meeting at the Secular League Open Forum.

"The real opposition here in the District to anti-vivisection is the Board of Health and the Department of Agriculture," she said. "We will never cease until our bill is passed for the District of Columbia."

In a general discussion most of the speakers supported the position of the address. Among those who participated were Prof. Harry Bradford, James R. Briggs, of the Humane Education Society; Francis D. Scott, John D. Bradley, Herbert Gutmann and Mrs. Gertrude E. Mackenzie.

HOOVER INTRODUCES WASHINGTON BOOKS

President Writes Foreword to Edition of First Chief's Works.

LITERARY GENIUS LAUDED

President Hoover has written the foreword to the first volume of the "Writings of George Washington," the great memorial edition which was authorized by a specific act of Congress to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington in 1932. This first volume has been completed and will be ready for distribution in a few weeks, according to the division of information and publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

In a few printed pages, the present engineer President, who is chairman of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, pays his tribute to the first engineer President.

The foreword, in part is as follows:

"The people of the United States are justly proud of their literary men and women. They likewise are proud of their outstanding statesmen. Literary power and statesmanship were combined in George Washington, the greatest political leader of his time and also the greatest intellectual and moral force of the Revolutionary period. Everybody knows Washington as a quiet member of the Virginia Assembly, of the two Continental Congresses and of the Constitutional Convention. Few people realize that he was also the most voluminous American writer of his period and that his principles of government have had more influence on the development of the American Commonwealth than those of any other man.

Modern Edition Planned.

"Thus one of the first decisions of the commission was to provide an edition of Washington's writings as complete as possible, in a form which would make it available for the present generation and forever hereafter.

"What is the message from Washington revealed by this complete and scholarly edition? First of all it includes Washington's own graphic records of his experiences on the frontier while it was still in the possession of the Indians. Throughout the series will be found letters and documents showing that he was the American of his time who had the liveliest sense of the absolute necessity of occupying the West and making it a part of an American commonwealth.

* * * *

Writings Establish Greatness.

"If nothing had been written by others about Washington's leadership in forming a new Nation, his papers and correspondence while President would forever establish him as a great constructive statesman. His private virtues are set forth from the earliest boy's letters down to the last entry that he made in his diary. Washington with his wife's children and grandchildren stands out as clearly as Washington at Yorktown.

"The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission is undertaking to throw light upon the character of Washington in many ways. None will be more enduring than this collection of his own words and thoughts. The addresses, the pageants, the public meetings, and the memorials of every kind which the Commission will encourage and support, will call public attention to the most striking of the events in his life."

Playground Is Urged In Stanton Park Area

The Park and Planning Commission has been asked to give consideration to the establishment of a playground in the locality of Stanton Park, by the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Engineers. On Friday night the engineers heard the resolution of the Stanton Park Citizens Association asking for the playground.

The engineers also requested that in designing the municipal center provision be made for a municipal reference research library. Reports of progress toward enacting laws requiring registration of engineers in the District and Maryland was also made.

$5,000 Voted War Victim's Mother

Parent of Washington Boy to Get Award if House Bill Passes Senate.

The mother of the Washingtonian who former Secretary of the Navy Daniels said "was the first sailor who lost his life in the World War" would be awarded $5,000 by a bill passed by the House and sent to the Senate.

She is Mrs. Annie M. Eopolucci, of 649 I street southeast, whose 21-year-old son, First Class Boatswain's Mate John E. Eopolucci, died on April 1, 1917, in the torpedoing and sinking of the American merchant steamer Astec, on which he had been transferred from the U. S. S. Dolphin in the navy yard here to serve in charge of seamen gunners.

The bill has been sought because Mrs. Eopolucci received no insurance, the war risk insurance act having gone into effect five days after his death. Eopolucci was born and reared in this city and attended Lenox School here. His father, Samuel Eopolucci, was a retired member of the Marine Band at the time of his death.

Mrs. Eopolucci lost another son in the war. William Anthony Eopolucci was killed while serving with Ameriposition to return to his $100,000-a-year post as president of the International Harvester Co.

He already has served as Farm Board chairman nearly a year beyond the period agreed upon when he accepted the position.

His successor will be appointed by President Hoover. The unofficial belief that Mr. Stone would be selected centers largely around the fact that he now is vice chairman and is popular with other members of the board.

Acts as Chairman.

For several weeks Mr. Stone has served as acting chairman. Other members of the board favor him to succeed Mr. Legge, and contend a political appointment would be little short of disastrous to the Farm Board program.

The term of William F. Schilling, dairy member, will expire in June.

In addition, C. C. Teague, fruit member, who has large citrus and nut interests in California, expects to resign in June. Appointed for one year, Mr. Teague accepted a reappointment last summer. Since that time, however, he said he could not remain beyond his present term.

Mr. Stone, who came to the board from Lexington, Ky., has been closely associated with Mr. Legge, and has followed each step in the formation of its policies.

WALES VIEWS PERU IN HOP FROM LIMA

GOING TO BUENOS AIRES

Lima, Peru, Feb. 16 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales and his royal party flew to Arequipa today for a visit to the southern Peruvian regions, which were old with the culture of the Incas before the days of the Spanish conquerors.

Ensconced in a three-motored ship of the Pan-American Grace Line, the Prince of Wales, Prince George and their entourage left Las Palmas military air field at 12:16 p. m., and at 4:48 p. m. were in Arequipa.

They will visit in this region for several days and then continue the trip, which eventually will take them to Buenos Aires for the opening of a British trade exposition next month.

The British Minister, the legation staff and Peruvian officials were at Las Palmas to bid the royal group farewell. When the plane took off it was escorted over Lima and Callao by four military airplanes.

The first president of the club, W. S. Bronson, will be the guest of honor, and talks will be made by Alfred P. Thom, general counsel of railway executives, and Philip P. Campbell, who has mised only one of the banquets in 25 years.

YOUR INCOME TAX

No. 15.

The revenue act provides that in computing net income, upon which the tax is assessed, there may be deducted from gross income several specific items, namely, business expenses, interest, taxes, losses, bad debts, depreciation, depletion and contributions.

Business expenses constitute, usually, the largest items. Typical expenses of a mercantile establishment are amounts paid for advertising, hire of employes, rent, insurance, light, fuel, water, telephone, postage, stationery, printing, &c. The expenses of a manufacturing business include labor, raw materials, supplies, light, heat, power and selling costs.

A professional man, such as a lawyer, doctor, dentist, &c., may deduct the cost of supplies used in his business, office rent, cost of light, heat, water and telephone used in his offices, the hire of office assistants and the amount expended in the operation and repair of an automobile used in making professional calls, dues to professional societies and subscriptions to professional journals. A professional man who uses his residence both as his office and his home may, if he pays rent, deduct the rental value of the rooms occupied by him as an office, also the cost of light and heat furnished these rooms, and a portion of the wages of domestic servants whose time is partly occupied in caring for his office. Amounts currently expended for books, furniture and professional instruments and equipment, the useful life of which is short, may be deducted.

The act provides for the deduction of "ordinary and necessary expenses incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business." Note should be taken of the words "ordinary and necessary." The Bureau of Internal Revenue has held, and is supported by the board of tax appeals and the courts, that both of these features are necessary. Ordinary and necessary expenses are defined as those which are usual and essential in the case of similar taxpayers.

"gravely concerned" over the development of an industry for supplying "home wine materials." It singled out specifically Fruit Industries, Ltd., saying this California concern had been loaned approximately $20,000,000 by the Farm Board.

"Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, their attorney, has been very active," the editorial said, "in advocating that the Government maintain a uniformly benevolent attitude toward the trade, in view of the fact that the United States practically holds a mortgage upon it."

It was suggested that a law be enacted requiring fruit juices for home consumption be preserved in such a way as to prevent fermentation. The editorial concluded that the American people would not be content to allow California grape interests to enjoy a "monopoly founded upon a violence to the United States Constitution."

Sponsors of Navy Extol Patriotism

Society Holds Services as Convention Feature; Bishop Speaks.

Annual patriotic services of the Society of the Sponsors of the United States Navy, a feature of its yearly convention here, were held yesterday afternoon in Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral, with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, as the principal speaker.

Prior to the services, the society joined with about a dozen other patriotic groups to mass their own group flags and American flags in front of the altar. Bishop Freeman made a short address on the importance of peace.

"The ships of the American Navy are not designed as weapons of oppression but for the conservation of peace," he said. "Every one knows the wisdom of a constabulary on the sea as well as on land. I like to think of the American flag as the symbol of the high ideals of the civilization of the Western world, the banner of liberty and an expression of our will to peace."

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

WOMEN WOULD LINK CHILDREN OF WORLD

60 YOUNGSTERS 'ENVOYS'

The women of the world will be mobilized for the education of childhood of the earth in world friendship, based on rational patriotism, according to plans made public yesterday by the United States Flag Association, of which President Hoover is honorary president general.

The movement will be undertaken by the association's newly formed Women's National Council, which Mrs. Hoover heads as honorary chairman, according to Col. James A. Moss, general president of the association. Other members of the council include Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. William Howard Taft and all the wives of members of the Cabinet.

Cooperating with the Women's Council will be a group including the President's Cabinet, Owen D. Young, Newton D. Baker, Adolph S. Ochs, Charles G. Dawes, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry F. Guggenheim.

The movement will be inaugurated officially on Flag Day, June 14, when threescore boys and girls selected from different sections of the country will gather in Washington for a week's visit, after which, as "envoys of friendship," they will go to England and France for the purpose of conveying to the children of these countries greetings from the boys and girls of America.

Jeweler and $25,000 In Gems Are Missing

New York, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The mysterious disappearance of a red-headed jeweler and $25,000 worth of uncut gems put police all over the city on the qui vive today.

Abraham H. Levy, police said, left his office Saturday forenoon with the jewels and has not been seen since. Today his wife appealed to police, tearfully telling them she believed he was kidnaped or killed.

CHAIN-STORE FOES LAUNCH NEW BODY

SCOPE IS HELD NATIONAL

The National Chamber of Associated Merchants, organized with the avowed purpose of fighting the "ever-increasing menace of the chain store system," has been chartered under the laws of the District of Columbia, with headquarters in Washington, it was announced yesterday.

Former Senator John F. Nugent, of Idaho, is president of the organization, and associated with him is Frank White, as treasurer, former United States treasurer; as secretary, William J. McGinniss, formerly executive of a Washington department store; as general counsel, John W. Price, formerly judge of corporation court, Bristol, Va.

The membership is composed of business associations in the Eastern, Central and Western States, and its backers say it represents 250,000 independent wholesalers, manufacturers and jobbers, and 1,000,000 independent retailers.

"The problem of the independent merchant," Mr. Nugent declared yesterday, "is one of the most serious facing the country. It is estimated reliably that 500,000 independent dealers, or one in every three, have gone down before the chains, and if the same ration is maintained during the next few years the major portion of them will be out of business. Main street will become a succession of chain stores and filling stations, all of them duplicate in design and color, and the neighborhood druggists, grocers, butchers and other retailers and small manufacturers will be a thing of the past."

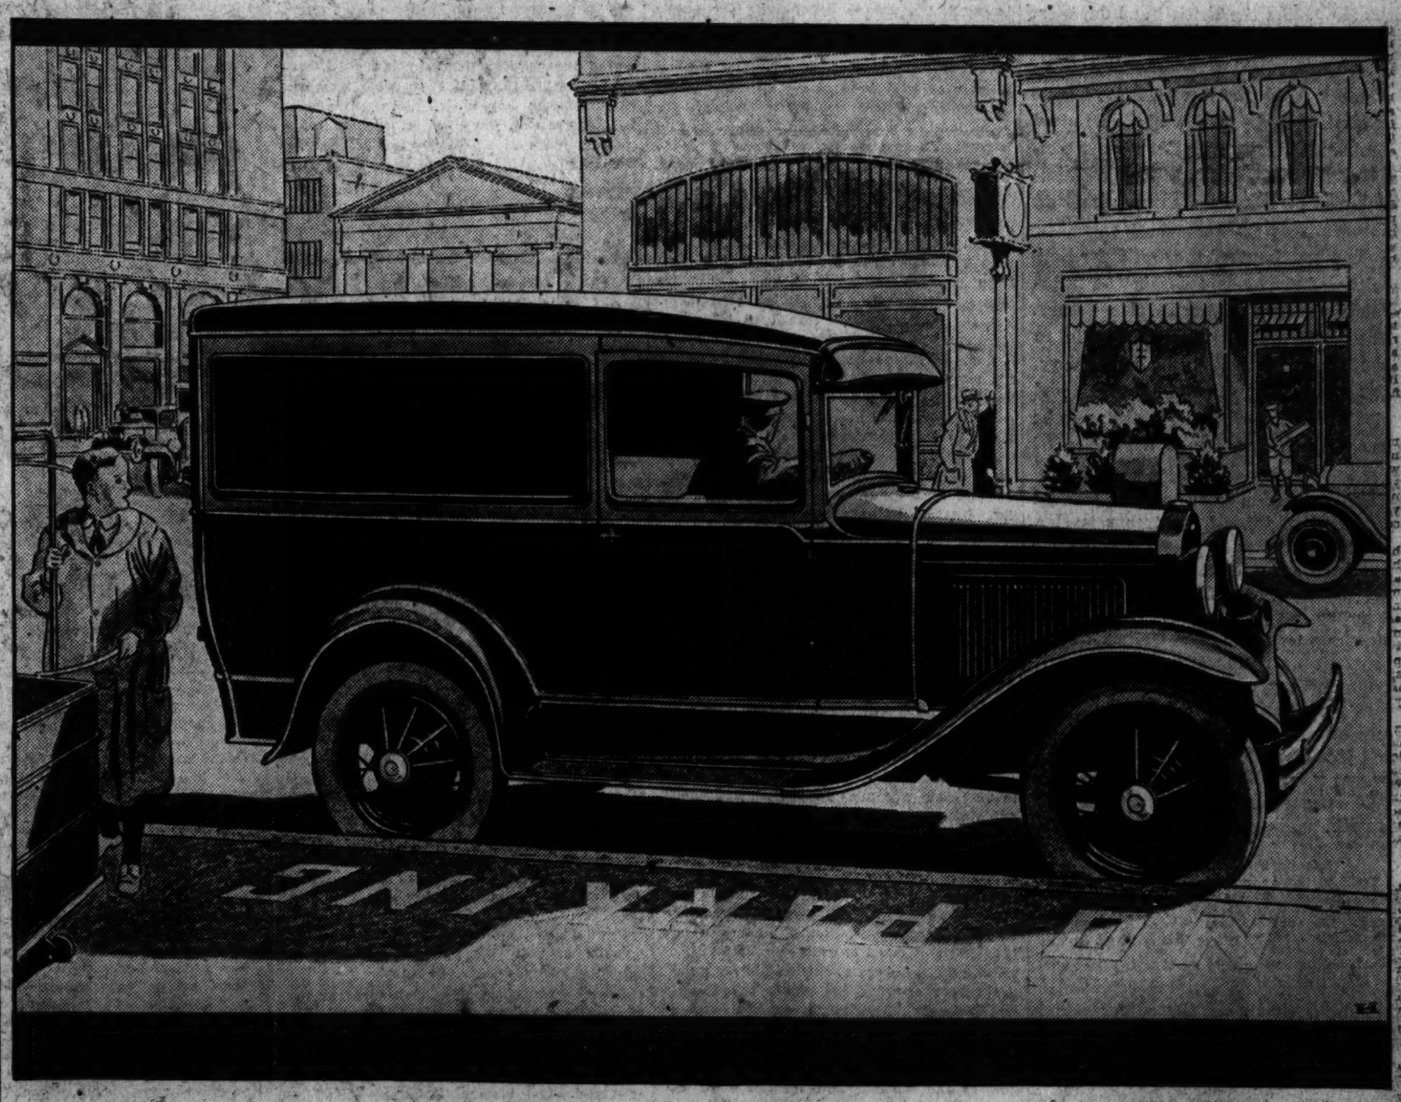
A drop-floor panel body now brings Ford economy to new commercial fields



DAILY, throughout the country, Ford commercial units are doing new jobs. A steadily increasing range of body-types, a choice of two different chassis, and a variety of especially designed equipment, all help to adapt the Ford for service in many businesses.

It is possible to select a Ford truck, or a Ford delivery car, which is exactly suited to almost any work required. Thus, the reliability, excellent performance, and definite economy of Ford units become directly available to a larger number of industries.

For example, a new body is offered on the light-delivery chassis. It is of the drop-floor panel type, a body of special convenience to cleaners and dyers, florists, radio dealers and others whose deliveries require unusual height from floor to roof. It is also used by specialty salesmen, as it permits easy loading and removal of bulky samples.

In addition to a wide selection of commercial bodies on the Model A chassis, there is a range of types on the 1½-ton truck chassis, with either 131½- or 157-inch wheelbase. There is a choice of open or closed cabs, of single or dual rear wheels, and of high or low rear-axle gear-ratios.

See your Ford dealer for details of commercial units, and equipment, suited to the requirements of your particular business.

★ FEATURES ★ of Ford Commercial Units

Four-cylinder, 40-horse-power engine. Torque-tube drive. Internal-expanding mechanical brakes, all fully enclosed. Forty different kinds of steel for specific purposes. Extensive use of fine steel forgings. More than 20 ball and roller bearings. Three different wheelbases. Two different chassis. Triplex shatter-proof windshields. Low first cost. Low cost of operation. Reliability and long life.

You may purchase a Ford truck or light commercial car on convenient, economical terms through the Authorized Ford Finance Plans of the Universal Credit Company.

NAVAL GOOD FAITH.

The bill providing for naval construction awaits action by both houses of Congress. A year will be lost in the laying down of necessary vessels unless action is taken by March 4.

The bill has been scaled down until it represents the minimum of new construction, below which the Navy may as well be abandoned so far as any purpose to build it up to the treaty standard is concerned. The object of the London negotiations resulting in the naval limitation treaty was to equalize the relative strength of the three greatest fleets—the British, American and Japanese—without extraordinary building. As the British and Japanese navies were relatively stronger in certain types of ships than the American, it was agreed that the first two should mark time until 1936 while the United States should increase its cruiser tonnage. In that year, if all goes well, another agreement may be made limiting further building.

The best hope of the world for limitation of armaments lies in the faithful observance of the London Treaty. The United States can contribute to world peace by observing this treaty, but in order to avoid future naval rivalry the United States Navy must be brought substantially to a position of parity with the British navy. If Congress should fail to provide for gradual construction toward the treaty level a reaction will surely come against all naval agreements, and any disturbance among foreign powers would be seized upon by foresighted Americans as a warning to make the United States Navy stronger than any other. American opinion is well known. It requires that the United States Navy shall, by agreement, be made equal to any other, and that if agreements should fail the United States Navy shall rank first.

The naval construction bill, therefore, is not a mere routine authorization of $74,000,000 for new vessels. It is a measure signifying America's faith in international agreements to limit armaments by removing causes of rivalry. If is America's most important practical action in behalf of world good will and peace. It is a notification to Great Britain and Japan that the United States intends to observe good faith and is satisfied that they are acting in good faith.

Failure of Congress to provide for naval construction as contemplated by the London Treaty may be construed by the other powers as a move to make the treaty a dead letter by indirection, to be followed by unrestricted naval increase. If the Americans do not avail themselves of the understanding whereby they can build up toward equality with Great Britain it may be surmised by the other powers that America does not aim at equality, but at something else. What else could it be but superiority—the greatest navy in the world? From that surmise to suspicion and renewed naval rivalry is but a step.

The Senate is about to determine whether it will take up the naval bill or something less important. The naval bill should be made the unfinished business until it is passed. No other measure now before the Senate equals it in importance. While the House is discussing bonus legislation the Senate can take a long step in promoting international understanding and peace by passing the naval bill. The construction provided for is well within the treaty rights of the United States, and is so recognized by the other parties to the treaty.

THE BONUS BLUNDER.

Mr. Tilson, leader of the House Republicans, warns his colleagues of the danger of making a serious blunder in enacting bonus legislation without regard to Treasury financing or the effect which bad legislation might have upon business conditions. He will vote against the bill that is to be submitted today. The hearings upon this bill are not yet available to members, and it is proposed to rush the bill through with only twenty minutes of debate on each side.

Some senators are in equal headlong haste, hoping to pass the bill by a big majority and to override the President's expected veto.

If Congress were aware of the shrinkage of Federal income it would not make the blunder of assuming an additional liability of $1,000,000,000 to $1,700,000,000 at this time. Income tax receipts will be summed up next month. Probably the collections will reveal a staggering loss of revenue. It does not stand to reason that individuals and corporations whose incomes dwindled to the disappearing point during 1930 will pay much into the Treasury this year.

Passage of the bonus bill as it now stands will necessitate an immediate increase of taxation. Is Congress willing to pass a bill increasing taxes? Which party is ready to assume responsibility for a new and heavy burden upon a depressed country? The party which stands firm for Treasury integrity and avoidance of extra taxes will win public confidence. If both parties should be guilty of wild extravagance and President Hoover should veto the bill, public opinion will support him and Congress will probably find it impossible to scrape up a two-thirds vote to overrule him.

The pending bill should be recommitted, for readjustment to harmonize with Treasury conditions. Secretary Mellon should be called by the committee, to furnish information concerning the state of the revenue. This information could be given in executive session, if deemed advisable.

POSTOFFICE LEASES.

Senator Blaine's committee on postoffice leases had a unique opportunity for public service when it was created ten months ago. Its objective was to investigate the leasing of buildings for use of the Postoffice Department with a view to correcting abuses and formulating a more economical policy. Instead it has frittered away its time trying to create political scandals, and the extravagant policy continues in effect.

For many years the administration has been advocating construction or purchase of postoffices to replace the buildings now leased. It is obvious that the Government with its cheap credit facilities and immunity from taxation can provide quarters of its own at a lower cost than it can rent them. Yet the department is forced to lease upward of 6,500 buildings from private owners.

Senator Blaine seems to have construed his mission as one of prosecuting postal officials rather than finding the facts and reporting them to Congress. No effort has been made to cooperate with the Postoffice Department. When Postmaster General Brown was called before the committee last month he discussed every phase of the question. But Senator Blaine then called him before an open hearing and sought to have him reveal the estimated value of properties that the Government intends to acquire. This can be interpreted in no other light than a deliberate attempt to embarrass the department and frustrate its plans for purchase at reasonable prices of property desired for postal uses.

STATES MAKE POOR SHOWING.

The President's Emergency Committee for Unemployment reports that public building construction already planned or contemplated in 29 States will total more than $132,000,000 during the current year if the recommendations of governors of those States or bills now before the State legislatures are adopted. A total of $36,350,000 is already available for State building construction during 1931 in those States, and programs calling for the appropriation of approximately $105,000,000 more are under consideration. "While these figures constitute merely a partial report of what the States are doing," comments Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the committee, "they furnish an interesting indication of the extent to which the executives and legislatures are giving consideration to the wisdom and feasibility of accelerated public building programs."

In the aggregate the figures bulk large. Actually, however, they represent an average, so far as funds already appropriated are concerned, of but $1,250,000 per State, and an average, with respect to projects planned or contemplated, of but $4,500,000 per State. Moreover, a considerable part of the programs authorized has to do with projects that would normally be carried through in 1931, and even the so-called emergency building programs planned or contemplated have to do with essential projects.

It has been obvious from the start that the States intended to depend largely upon Uncle Sam for unemployment relief. In certain instances legislatures or governors have sensed their responsibility in the present emergency and have met it with expanded programs of public activity, but generally an attempt has been and is being made to unload the whole burden upon the Federal Government. The mere fact that the average of projects planned or contemplated is but $4,500,000 per State shows this to be the case. If the States were really sincere in their attack upon the problems of unemployment within their borders they could raise two or three times an average of $4,500,000 for public building projects.

Col. Woods points out that wherever sound construction programs can be properly financed, it is certain that action by the States to speed up their public works, combined with similar action by municipalities and by the Federal Government, will take up a good deal of the slack of unemployment in the building trades and will create much additional employment in many related lines of endeavor. It is generally recognized now that the stimulation of building acts as a stimulant to the whole industrial machine. The States, however, are slacking their responsibilities. If they would open their reserves of credit and inaugurate genuinely large-scale emergency building programs, instead of depending entirely upon the Government, they would greatly expedite the return of their own prosperity.

VAGRANT CRIMINALS.

It is axiomatic that crime waves and hard times go hand in hand. Certain types of men, deprived of the possibility of earning an honest living by the industrial stagnation, turn to begging. Other types turn to crime. Throughout the country there has been an increase of crime, during the depression. Washington has not escaped the crime wave, despite the fact that the local depression is not nearly so serious as is the depression in industrial communities.

Since the first of the year, the police department reports, there have occurred eighteen more holidays than in the corresponding period of 1930. Many of the victims were taxicab drivers, but storekeepers, gasoline station attendants, and pedestrians also were forced to hand over their valuables to holdup men. Larcenies and housebreakings increased considerably as compared with the corresponding period of last year. Eleven homicides were registered in the first 45 days of the year, an increase of seven over those reported for the first 45 days of 1930. These increases occurred despite the fact that the Police Department has been exercising unusual vigilance against criminals.

Most of the increase in crime may be attributed directly to the floating population that has drifted into Washington, laboring under the misapprehension that jobs are more plentiful here than elsewhere. The Government building program is a veritable magnet, drawing unemployed down-and-outers from all over the country. With those who have come to Washington in the hope of obtaining work is a class which believes that Washington is more prosperous than other cities, and which has made its way here for the purpose of preying upon that prosperity. The Police Department knows well that the city has been overrun with undesirables, but because no workable vagrancy law has been provided for Washington, the police are practically powerless to combat the invasion.

Congress should recognize the seriousness of the situation and make speed toward enacting the pending vagrancy law. This law would enable the police to drive from the city those who have no visible means of support before they have had an opportunity to rob and pillage. At this particular time the lack of such a law is a matter of grave concern.

LITTLE, BUT GOOD

From the Springfield Union.

One of the educational curiosities of the day is the fame which has come to Hampden-Sidney College at Hampden-Sidney, Va., with the announcement that this little college led all others in the country in a rating based on the percentage of living graduates listed in "Who's Who." The rating was made by two Lafayette College professors and was 7.45, while Amherst College came second with 7.40. Harvard was third with 6.60 and Yale and Princeton occupied sixth and ninth places.

Hampden-Sidney College is a name little known in educational circles, although it was founded with the founding of the Republic in 1776. It has seldom had more than 100 students, although one of its famous graduates was the first President Harrison. Its methods might be considered old-fashioned in the light of the modern educational theories, but its graduates have been able to achieve fame from an education which has always been so conservative as by modern educators to be considered inadequate to the demands of the time. Its curriculum seeks to give a broad cultural education and not one of vocation; and emphasis has been placed on the classics, and on English, mathematics and the sciences. Its elective system is much restricted. A student may not browse around among courses to pick out those which will give him most easily his college degree; but certain studies are demanded of him, with a high standard of marking.

Such conservatism may be deplored by the most up-to-date of modern educators, and of course it would be hooted by many of the students of our larger colleges. But its record in "Who's Who" is an argument not easily answered. One element in its success which may be the factor and that is the quality of its students. Its young men have been for the most part poor, but of character and intellectual force. They are the sons of doctors, lawyers, ministers and planters in large numbers; and sons, grandsons and great grandsons of former students have been a large proportion of them.

It has not been a college where young men have been parked, so to speak, while their wealthy parents were trying to find something for them to do. Neither has it been an institution for social contacts or for athletic prestige. It seems to have maintained the original purpose of its founding, as a place for training the mind. If it has attracted young men of character, it is because it has offered them what young men of character desire.

The fact that Amherst, which stands second, has been devoted to the idea of a cultural training, not neglecting the classics, is significant, also because it gives added strength to the theory that true education consists in training the mind with a few studies rather than cluttering them up with imperfect achievements in many studies. While modern educators, claiming to be progressive, have been departing widely from the idea of cultural training these small colleges with conservative methods have been excelling in product.

Worcester Telegram: Whatever is the inside story of Gen. Butler's talk about Premier Mussolini's automobile killing a child, the fact remains that in the United States we continue to kill people with our automobiles at the rate of more than 30,000 per year, and this slaughter in a sense is more purposeless than that of war.

THEY CAN'T SEE YOU.

Wear light-colored clothes, says the Minnesota Highway News, carry a newspaper or a handkerchief, or else wait until there are no automobiles in sight before you cross a street or highway at night, is a good safety rule. Inability of drivers to see dark-clad pedestrians has been responsible for many accidents at night.

Theoretically, legal headlights should reveal a person 200 feet ahead of the car, but if the person happens to be wearing dark clothes from head to foot, and the road surface is also dark, it can't be done. If there are no cars coming the other way, clothes of any shade except very dark are usually discernible, but when lighted cars are coming both ways, only the brightest objects are visible to the driver. A white collar or scarf, light stockings, a book or paper or a bundle, even a large bright button, may often be a life saver.

JUST FOLKS

DESTINY.

It seemed so futile—all the years of pain
And poverty and anguish and despair,
With never anything but toil and care;
The tramp to work, the slow march home again,
Even the struggle to improve seemed vain,
Always the rooms above, below, stayed bare,
The world had never noticed he was there
Or offered goals which he had strength to gain.

Two of his children added to his woe.
The third and youngest all unwanted came,
But his were eyes which seemed to be aflame,
His was a mind that men of genius know,
Now in that glory of that son he sees
How strangely God works out men's destinies.

When Caesar Crossed the Rubicon, He Began the History of Mussolini.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A CHEMIST pours an amber liquid into a test tube and adds a few drops of liquid that is green. The mixture turns dark. Then the chemist adds a third liquid—a reagent—and at once the mixture is crystal clear.

He can repeat the experiment many times, with complete foreknowledge of the result, for each reaction is made inevitable by the unchanging laws of chemistry.

Result must follow cause, and to know the cause is to know the effect.

When the farmer sows his grain, he knows that each fertile seed will swell in the moist earth and put forth a green shoot that will climb upward to sunlight and air—that the plant will flower and form seed and ripen for the harvest.

He can see the harvest in the grain of seed, for experience has taught him the laws that govern plant life.

There are fixed and unchanging laws that govern every detail of the universe, from the movement of the atom to the pathway of the stars, and the operation of these laws is an eternal repetition of cause and effect.

The thing that happens today causes another thing to happen tomorrow and that in turn causes yet another to happen, and so on and on without ceasing.

Always the effect is the inevitable result of a cause that preceded it. It is the law.

Why, then, should any man doubt that his destiny is fixed?

If you were wise enough, you could stand at a distance and see the whole pattern of life reaching back from the present to the beginning of time. And you would see how one detail of the pattern developed from the one before it, as seed follows the flower, so that an unbroken chain of events made the present as inevitable as the night that follows day.

Why, then, should any man question the Creator's knowledge of things to come.

The Intelligence that devised the laws must have known how they would operate. Beyond any doubt the Creator knew what effect would follow the first cause and could foresee every effect that followed—step by step, detail by detail, through the whole long pattern of history.

To think otherwise is to doubt the Creator's wisdom or to suspect that His laws fail.

"But," you say, "I have free will and can change the course of my life today."

But, no; your exercise of free will is itself an effect that follows a cause. It is but another link in an unbroken chain that reaches back to the beginning.

Try as you will, only by disregarding reason can you question the law and the process of cause and effect that makes all life one pattern.

PRO AND CON

Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great Show, "Politics," Staged in Congress.

Bad Bonus Bill.

(New York Herald-Tribune.)

The compromise bonus bill espoused by the House ways and means committee is undoubtedly a concession to organized political pressure. It is not a wise measure in the sense that it will help to speed the return of prosperity, which is what the veterans, in common with the rest of the population, should most desire. On the contrary, it is bound to complicate to some degree the financing of the Government's obligations, and to this extent retard the recovery of which the country stands so sorely in need.

The best thing to be said for the bill is that it preserves the insurance feature of the bonus. Payment in cash of the face value of the certificates would have wiped this out. There would have been nothing left of the veterans' claim on the Government for him or his dependents to fall back on in case of his incapacity or death. In view of the economic plight of the Nation, however, the bill still amounts to political pandering to a few at the risk of injury to the many.

Please Don't Cooperate!

(Topeka Capital.)

Hoover will have another Congress on his hands after March 4, and we suspect he is praying that whatever happens the Democrats will not start out pledging themselves to cooperate with him, like the Democrats at the start of the present session.

Navy Work Makes Jobs.

(Indianapolis News.)

Congress seems to have learned from some one in Washington that the Navy appropriation bills contain a lot of jobs for men who need the work.

A Veteran's View.

The silliest subject under popular discussion just now is that of immediate cash payment of three and a half billion dollars soldier bonus claims. "It will help business to have this great amount of money put in circulation," say the plan's advocates. Have you thought what that implies? Well, just this. It is assumed as a matter of course that every soldier is simple-minded and will at once spend his part of the fund; get rid of it. That may help business, but how about the soldiers? A year, six months, thirty days hence will they be any better off than they were before? Their money will have been spent to "help business" and they'll be holding the empty sack. Remember in the Army "business" in the company street was always good for about 48 hours after pay day. By that time a few sharpers had all the money. Payment of the bonus is expected by the big boys to work the same way.

People Want Treaty Navy.

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

President Hoover has communicated the desire of the Administration to have action on these naval bills at this session. There is plenty of time for them to pass both houses if only the obstructionist game is not played in the Senate. The $74,000,000 building measure will be the first step since the London Conference toward a "treaty fleet" which, in the course of the next seven or eight years, would be on a plane of parity with the British navy.

There is no doubt that preponderant opinion in the country is in favor of building up to the treaty limits.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Late Dr. Carusi a Friend and Counselor of Filipino Students, Who Cherish His Memory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The unexpected death of Dr. Charles F. Carusi, chancellor of the National University, is a loss not only to this city and the people of the United States, but to Filipinos in America who have come to know him and those living in the Philippine Islands as well.

The Filipinos who have studied and are now studying in the National University found in Dr. Carusi a father, a brother with a big heart, and above all, a friend, tried and true. There were times when we had to go to him for advice, and good advice he always gave us. There were days when we had our difficulties, and he always appeared to us with a smile on his face and a spirit of cheerfulness in his being. He talked to us as brothers; he treated us as friends. In spite of his manifold activities in the university, to say nothing of the various connections and responsibilities he had outside, he always had time to attend to those who called on him for assistance and guidance.

Perhaps, it is not generally known that the National University, of which Dr. Carusi has been the moving spirit for years, has sent out from its halls energetic young men who today are occupying high and responsible positions in the government of the Philippine Islands and also in some fields of Philippine life. Some are prominent members of the Philippine bar, others have been governors of provinces. One is at present secretary of commerce and communications in our cabinet, and still others are making good in this country. These and many more are a tribute—eloquent and genuine—to the institution so loyally served and greatly loved by a man among men who in life was Dr. Charles F. Carusi, chancellor of the National University.

Dr. Carusi lives no more; he is dead, but his memory lives forever. We shall always remember him as a noble father, an understanding brother and a real friend.

Growth of Los Angeles an Amazing Phenomenon—Thoughts on Cultural Growth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an example of rapid city growth in the United States that of Los Angeles seems to be about as interesting as any that can be named.

The city was established in 1850 with a population of 1,150 and an area of 28.01 miles.

In the Associated Press summary, which I have just read, it is only necessary to consider an item or so of the Los Angeles development in order to justify the use of the word "amazing."

Today Los Angeles is the fifth city in the United States in population—1,238,048. It is the largest city in the world in area—442.75 square miles.

Indicating that the growth in population and area is a healthy one, Los Angeles has important industrial activities besides that of the moving pictures, and its total commerce jumped from 3,500,000 tons, valued at $154,000,000, in 1920, to more than 20,000,000 tons, valued at over $1,000,000,000 in 1930.

Of interest in connection with the National Capital's public building program is the circumstance that Los Angeles has a new 32-story, $7,000,000 city hall, around which is to be built a civic center.

In considering a city expansion like this I can not help thinking what a fine thing it would be if we could fix the cultural standing of cities as we do their standing in material development. If Los Angeles, for instance, could register 99 per cent law observance or business integrity or church attendance it would call for even greater pride than she feels in her growth in population, area, and wealth, splendid though it is.

I am optimist enough to believe that maybe in the future no city will be considered altogether great which can not boast of its educational advantages and the high quality of its citizenship.

It is pleasant to imagine a time when cities, like citizens, will be ranked according to their mental, moral and spiritual, as they now are according to their material, growth. I like to believe—in fact, I think there is good reason to believe—that in such a rating the National Capital would stand first.

Old-Timer Surprised at Jargon That Would Have Meant Nothing to Pre-Volsteadians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The controversy as to whether "guzzle" or "quaff," "beaker" or "seidel" or "stein" are proper words in the language of beer-drinking is astonishing, that is, so far as it has anything to do with pre-Volstead days in the United States. To get so far away from home on a question of beer only goes to show how encouraging has been the effect since the eighteenth amendment cut off the free flow of booze in this country.

In those good old days when some one with the price remarked, "Let's all have a drink," and the gang lined up to the bar, the idea that they were to "guzzle" or to "quaff" was far from their thoughts. Any one who mentioned a "beaker" or a "seidel" or a "flagon" would have been looked upon as queer. It was "Make mine a 'schooner,'" or "Gimme a 'pony.'"

If an old-time "booze-hoister" felt like giving full expression to his satisfaction with the beer he drank he didn't talk about "guzzling" or "quaffing" or anything like that, but simply "lapped up the suds."

The language of the corner groggery trade was just as simple. When the pre-Volsteadians craved a supply of lager for domestic use it was brought home in a bucket, and the festive name of the transaction was "rushing the growler" or "chasing the duck."

I might go further into details, but I think this statement, which any old-timer who "knows his onions" will verify, should be sufficient to show that the wet language of America's drinking days was marked by democratic simplicity and not borrowed from books or tainted by foreign lingo.

ALFONSO STRIVES TO FORM CABINET

Fate of Throne Is Regarded as Linked With Complexion of Ministry.

NATION FAIRLY TRANQUIL

Madrid, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—All Spain was comparatively tranquil today as King Alfonso conferred with political leaders to form a new cabinet on which may depend the peace of the country and possibly the fate of the throne itself.

Considerable difficulty is being experienced in reconciling the conflicting viewpoints of the political factions and in obtaining the cooperation of discordant party leaders toward finding a successor to Premier Damaso Berenguer, who resigned yesterday.

The political turmoil may be increased unless the king succeeds in harmonizing the opposing factions. However, if he does bring them to an agreement by putting some "Lefts" in the new government, he will give power to those forces which are openly opposed to existence of a monarchy.

Police Disperse Crowds.

Numerous political meetings which had been scheduled for today in Madrid and elsewhere were suspended by police to prevent possible disorders. Crowds packed the streets around the meeting places and jeered at the police, who were kept busy dispersing them, but no serious fighting occurred.

Other noisy crowds gathered in connection with the pre-Lent carnival. Parades were started and there were shouts against the government. Some arrests were made.

Francisco Cambo, head of the Catalonian party in Barcelona, conferred with the king at the palace and the king paid a visit to Gen. Berenguer, who is unable to walk because of an infected foot.

Persistent rumors in well-informed circles are that Santiago Alba may be the new premier, with a Liberal party cabinet. He has been summoned from Paris, where he has been living, and is due in Madrid tomorrow night.

Alba was recommended for the office by the Conde de Romanones, former premier, and it was intimated he might receive the support of Cambo. It has become more doubtful that Admiral Juan Aznar will be the new premier.

Constitutionalists, headed by Sanchez Guerra, have refused to support Aznar because they say he would just be another Berenguer.

Alba Replies to King.

Paris, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Santiago Alba, through Quinones de Leon, Spanish Ambassador in Paris, today answered King Alfonso's telegram requesting that he give the sovereign advice about the present ministerial crisis in Madrid.

According to information given out at Alba's headquarters here, the former minister told Alfonso further transitory cabinets would only aggravate the natonal crisis in Spain, financially and politically.

Alba advocated formation of a ministry by the concentration of all parties which cabinet would immediately convoke a constituent assembly.

A report from Madrid said Alfonso had summoned Alba home, but a spokesman for Alba said this evening Alba was not returning to Madrid.

Court Rule Covers Ruble Repayment

Value of Funds in U. S. Bank to Be Based on Russian Rate.

New York, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The appellate division of the Supreme Court has decided that depositors of rubles in the National City Bank at Petrograd the day the Soviet government closed the bank are entitled to recover only the Russian value of the ruble on that day, namely 4½ cents, and not the New York value, 13 cents.

The decision was made in the suit of C. B. Richard & Co. against the National City Bank. The decision reverses a ruling of the Supreme Court, which held the bank liable for the New York value of the ruble.

The decision will be far reaching in affecting the course of settlement, in millions of dollars worth of claims by other depositors in the Petrograd branch of the National City Bank.

'ENEMY' NAVY SAILS UPON PANAMA CANAL

Defense Fleet Rallies to Protect Region From Invading Force.

MYSTERY VEILS MOVES

Panama City, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Lean ships in battleship gray churned the salty waters somewhere in the Pacific today, speeding toward the Panama Canal in an effort to prove that the world-famous waterway could be taken by an enemy approaching from the west.

Massed on the Pacific side of Panama stood another armada of the United States Navy, bent on proving that the canal is invulnerable.

At one minute past midnight today the annual naval maneuvers of the American sea forces were on, and for a week the movements of the opposing forces will be more or less shrouded in mystery.

Radio Is Silenced.

The radio equipment of the various units was silenced, except for the sending of "war" messages, thus shutting off the stories of shipboard correspondents who have been writing for the American press. Even the messages to the Navy Department in Washington are restricted.

For more than a week the vessels of the United States scouting fleet have been assembling in the isthmian region, their task being to defend the Panama Canal and the theoretically completed Nicaraguan waterway from the incursions of the enemy.

This is the "Blue" fleet, under command of Vice Admiral Arthur L. Willard, and it seeks to prove the value of aircraft in protecting the interoceanic ditches.

Strength Is in Air.

While it consists of all the American vessels presumably able to meet an attack in this region, its strength is predominantly in the air.

In addition to the battleships Arkansas, nine 6-inch gun cruisers, several submarines and a number of destroyers, it is reinforced by the mammoth naval dirigible Los Angeles, the great aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga, carrying a large fleet of airplanes, and a number of long-radius patrol planes.

The "enemy" is the "Black" fleet, commanded by Admiral Frank H. Schofield. Normally known as the battle fleet and operating in Pacific waters, it is greatly superior to the defending fleet in strength and power of surface ships, but inferior in the air. It is composed of four powerful battleships, cruisers and destroyers and carriers—theoretically—a large expeditionary army for landing forces.

Influenza in Cork Leads To Lighter Lent Rules

Cork, Irish Free State, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The Bishop of Cork announced in a pastoral letter today a dispensation of "the fast and abstinence of Lent, except in Friday abstinence," owing to the prevalence of influenza.

Archbishop Byrne also announced that owing to the condition of public health in the Dublin archdiocese there would be a similar dispensation with specified exceptions.

GIDEONS PUT NEW BOOKS IN NINE INNS

530 COPIES DISTRIBUTED

Guests in nine of the leading hotels of the National Capital will find brand-new Bibles in their rooms today.

They were given to the hotels yesterday afternoon by the Gideons, following a mass meeting and dedication of the copies of Holy Writ at the Washington Hotel. Hotels receiving the Bibles were the Willard, Harrington, Ambassador, Hamilton, Lee House, Metropolitan, Burlington, Harris and Whitelaw. More than 530 Bibles were distributed.

Charles H. Gundersdorff, of Baltimore, president of the National Federation of Men's Bible Classes, made the principal address at the dedication service, taking as his subject the words of St. Timothy, "Place to Find Light." He described the powerful influence of the Bible on the people of the world and how men and women, regardless of their characters, might be beneficially affected by the sight of the holy book.

Samuel R. Boggs, of Philadelphia, presided at the service, which was featured by the singing of "I Need Thee Every Hour," "Throw a Line" and "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Gideons preached at several Washington churches yesterday morning and told of the formation of the organization 32 years ago; how the idea was first greeted with jeers and later with approbation. More than 1,000,000 copies of the Bible have been distributed in hotels since the Gideons were started, congregations were told.

Fascist Officials Held, Confess Radio Bombing

Brussells, Belgium, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Julien Vandeput and Raymond Parent, chairman and treasurer of the Belgian Nationalist Fascist Club, were arrested today after police said they confessed placing a bomb which exploded in a Brussels radio station last Wednesday night.

Socialists were broadcasting that night—the station had been giving all political parties a turn at the ether—and the Fascists said they set the explosive in protest against the Socialists broadcasting the song, "The Internationale."

Macedonians Kidnap Bulgars, Sofia Hears

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—All Sofia was in a state of excitement today over an unverified report that followers of the Macedonian revolutionary leader, Pance de Mihailoff, had swept down on the Protogueroffist camp and kidnaped a number of their most prominent members.

Among those seized was said to be Georgie Popchristoff, chief of the central revolutionary committee. Police have arrested some of the Macedonians, who were deported into the interior as a precaution.

RUSSIA MIGRATING BACK TO FARMING

EQUIPMENT IS LACKING

Moscow, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Soviet Russia is going "back to the farm," according to figures just issued by the government.

During the last ten days in January and the first ten in February a total of 726,000 families joined the collective farms, the figures show. This migration is the greatest in history. Development of these farms has always been the backbone of the Soviet movement.

The word "joined" is used by the government as meaning that these families have made application to enter the collective farms. The majority will be accepted, although the Kulaks, or rich peasants, are not permitted to take part in the movement.

Contrast to Present.

In contrast to the present situation, the government was having difficulty getting families for the farms last year, and almost had to force the peasants to return to the soil. Under present conditions, according to the authorities, enthusiasm for farm life is so great that the government can pick and choose those it wishes to put at this work.

Most of the families who have applied to join the movement come from the Ukrainian republic, North Caucasus, the upper and lower Volga and the German republic. They are expected to move to the farms gradually during the spring in time to get next season's crops planted.

The widespread acceptance of the invitation to settle on the farms is causing the government some embarrassment as the agriculture commissariat has agreed to provide all the collectives with tractors and other machinery. Last year much machinery was bought in the United States while machine plants were constructed here. These are not operating full capacity and there is not sufficient machinery on hand.

Up-to-Date Equipment.

As a result, numerous workers on the collective farms this year will not have modern machinery and will have to struggle along with the old methods. This probably will cause some dissatisfaction, but the government is promising to supply everybody with up-to-date equipment within another year.

It is estimated that the collective farms will cultivate 66,000,000 hectares of land in 1931. The capital invested by the state on the collective farms this year is placed at 3,800,000,000 rubles (about $1,900,000,000).

Liberals Support Farm Market Act

Socialistic Plan of Labor Designed to Increase Home Production.

London, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The Labor government, with the support of the Liberals, plans to teach John Bull how to feed himself with his own products. David Lloyd George and his Liberal following gave their support to the agricultural marketing bill, on second reading last week, welcoming its potential aid to unemployment, despite its socialistic characteristics.

The bill is definitely socialistic despite its marked similarities to the American system of cooperative societies.

The principal difference between the American group marketing plan and the proposed British scheme is that in America memberships are entirely voluntary and any farmer who wants to can sell on the open market, whereas under the new British system there would be no holdouts.

MacDonald Is Rapped For Palestine Stand

Jerusalem, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Arab newspapers expressed much dissatisfaction today with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's letter to Dr. Chaim Weizmann last week, clarifying the British government's policy regarding Palestine.

The Arab press commented that the white paper on Palestine—which aroused world-wide protests by Jews last summer—was becoming, after these explanations, a "black paper."

SUNSHINE DESERTS STOCK MART BULLS

Early Profits of Week Are Dissipated Partially in Reaction.

BROKERS GO TO FLORIDA

New York, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Bulls frolicked through the stock market during a few days of dazzling speculative sunshine this week, but after the holiday on Thursday, they discovered that spring had not arrived after all, and there was an exodus of market operators southward.

Whether they will try to project a little warmth into the market through brokers' wires from Florida remains to be seen, but at any rate, the share market has had a rather remarkable thawing out. Share prices have broken out of the narrow trading range of the first five weeks of the year to climb back to the best levels since last October, and for three successive days the turnover in the stock exchange ranged from 4,100,000 to 4,800,000 shares, the best sustained volume of the up-side since last April.

While much of the advance was of a strongly manipulative flavor, and what economic improvement it was based on was largely of an intangible character, the upturn did much to create a better feeling in financial quarters. The quiet, narrow movements in the preceding weeks had done nothing to dissipate the oppressive atmosphere of uncertainly left by the drastic readjustments of December. Now that incubus appears to have been removed.

Three Billions Added.

During the first three days of the week, the price index of 90 representative shares was boosted 6.1 points, or slightly more than the entire net gain of January, which in quoted market value amounted to more than $3,000,000,000. With the more shorts largely driven to cover and enthusiasm somewhat cooled over the Lincoln's birthday holiday, bulls found on Friday that the advance had used up its motive power.

Also, the soldier bonus controversy with its potential effects upon the investment market, again intervened. During the final two trading sessions of the week, the list yielded nearly a point of its gain, but it steadied during the final session, and losses on that day were negligible.

The vigorous bull activity resulted in an increase in brokers' loans of $33,000,000 for the week ended Wednesday. With the exception of the small increase of $6,000,000 in the last week of December, this was the first upturn in loans since third week of September. In the interim, loans contracted about 47 per cent, reaching the low level of $1,716,000,000. The sudden realization that the market had been reduced almost to a cash basis presumably was an important factor in the decision of bulls to launch a drive against the lingering short interest.

Depression of 19 Months.

In reply to suggestions that this may prove only a false upturn, like that of a year ago, it was pointed out that false upturns at the end of major bear markets normally occur with money decidedly less plentiful than at present, and much earlier in a period of economic depression.

The downturn in business has now progressed nineteen months, which is considerably longer than the average cyclical downward movement in post Civil War economic history. Conservative bankers suggested that there might be a real danger in a too violent bull market at this time, but it was felt that a restrained upward movement might provide some stimulus to business and further bolster financial situations by increasing the asset value of security holdings.

Week's Turnover On Curb Improved

Best Prices Since October Appear During Bullish Demonstrations.

New York, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Prices not seen since last October have appeared in the curb market as a result of the bullish demonstrations last week.

The rise was accompanied by a greatly expanded volume of trading. Daily turnovers which had been around 300,000 shares swelled to above 700,000 and so improved was the speculative interest that the number of stocks traded increased rapidly.

Specialties, after showing an inclination to rally since the first of the month, reflected smaller available supplies and extended their gains. Oils were helped by the Vacuum-Standard of New York merger. Utilities lagged for a day or two but finally caught the spirit dominating the market and recovered briskly. Electric Bond & Share crossing 50 for the first time in several months.

Northern States Power "A," Standard Power, American Gas & Electric and Commonwealth Edison rose 5 or 6 points each. Public Service of Northern Illinois soared 16.

Among the industrials there was pronounced strength in Aluminum of America, Ford of Canada "B" and other rather inactive shares. Cord, largest holder of Auburn Auto, failed to show the exuberance of the latter issue and moved up only a couple of points. Stutz was strong. Western Air Express and Aviation Corporation advanced.

Vacuum Oil yielded the 4-point rally of Monday's opening and most of the other petroleum stocks tapered off late in the week.

INDUSTRIAL BONDS DISPLAY STRENGTH

UNCERTAIN AIR PREVAILS

New York, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Corporate industrials and stock privilege issues made their first bid of the new year for the attention of buyers in the bond market week just closed, coincident with the bullish trend of stocks.

The performance of industrials, which as a group have suffered more than rails and utilities from the business depression, was the best of the year, and together with the outburst of activity in convertibles, contributed virtually the only constructive development in an abbreviated week of trading.

The element of uncertainty as to what Congress will do in respect to the soldiers' bonus remained throughout the week to put a damper on buying. Rails and utilities moved irregularly in a comparatively narrow groove and at the close were just a shade better.

United States Governments started the week in a stable manner but ran into the most active liquidation of the year on Wednesday following predictions of Ogden Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury, that news that would not be as favorable as anticipated would develop in 48 hours in reference to the soldiers' bonus.

Declines were narrow in contrast with the previous reaction which followed the original proposals for full cash redemption of the veterans' certificates, but continued to the end of the week. The opposition of Secretary Mellon to the compromise proposal to increase the loan value of certificates to 50 per cent, left the financial community in a dubious frame of mind at the end.

The flow of capital into industry, which was rather heavy in January, was held in check for the second successive week, in line with predictions of investment bankers that there would be little activity in marketing new issues until the soldiers' bonus is removed from the realm of uncertainty. Offerings of $55,000,000 were virtually all for State or city governments.

There were signs in midweek of improved inquiry for some of the foreign loans, notably standard European governments and in one or two sessions the group made the best advance in the market.

MOTOR REALM AIDS IN RECOVERY TREND

COMMODITY PRICES SLIP

New York, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—A tow from the motor industry helped general industry further along the road to recovery during the past week.

The business highway in mid-February, however, is infrequently in condition to permit speedy progress, and it is therefore not surprising that decisive acceleration has not been experienced.

Manufacturing activity in the automobile centers continues to expand, and has reached better levels than conservative estimates at the start of the year anticipated. One of the leading producers has more workers on its pay roll than at any time since last March.

Steel Output Stimulated.

The better demand from the motor makers has caused some further quickening of steel production, and output as last estimated for the entire industry was 50 per cent of capacity, against 48 per cent a week previously. Steel trade circles, however, continue to take a conservative view of the situation, and some impatience over the continuance of a spotty and uncertain demand is expressed. Nevertheless, further marked gains in steel mill activity should not, in keeping with seasonal trends, be expected until March. In the meantime, prices have shown a little wavering here and there.

While there has as yet been no statistical evidence of general improvement in the building industry, it is notable that the lumber trade in the Pacific Northwest is receiving large orders, and cement mills are increasing their output substantially. Orders for structural steel in the past week were comparatively small. Public works construction is still being delayed by a rather hesitant condition of the bond market, which some observers feel may persist until the soldiers' bonus question is definitely settled. In the past week, however, there has been a resumption of municipal financing in moderate volume.

Retail Reports Mixed.

Reports regarding retail and wholesale trade are rather mixed, and general conclusions are difficult. Nevertheless, a fair volume of merchandise is moving, under the stimulus of low prices, and wholesalers report moderate business in preparation for the Easter trade. The textile industry has continued to increase output in most lines, although prices have shown unexpected and troublesome unsettlement. Eastern shoe manufacturers were more active.

In general, commodity prices have continued to slip lower during the past week, although a strong stock market temporarily helped the more speculative lines, such as grain and cotton. Copper and tin prices have firmed, but building materials, chemicals, hides and leather, five stock and miscellaneous agricultural products have declined. It is notable, however, that the decline was less uniform than it has been in several preceding weeks.

Freight car loadings as reported for the latest week showed a small gain, but the movement of coal continues low, influenced in part by warm weather. Electric power production, as reported for the first week of February, declined a little more than is normal for that period.

To the Holders of 5% Gold Debentures, Series A, due September 1, 1953, and 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation:

Associated Gas and Electric Company, by letters dated January 16, 1931 (copies of which will be furnished upon request), has offered to holders of the above mentioned debentures and preferred stock the opportunity, subject to certain conditions stated in such letters, of exchanging their holdings of such debentures, on a par for par basis, for Convertible 5% Gold Debentures, due 1950, of Associated Gas and Electric Company and their holdings of such preferred stock, on a share for share basis, for $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock of Associated Gas and Electric Company. Interest on the debentures and dividends on the preferred stock will be adjusted so as to be continuous and not overlapping.

Manufacturers Trust Company, W. C. Langley & Co. and Bonbright & Company, Incorporated, the bankers who originally offered such securities of Rochester Central Power Corporation, have advised us, as shown by the letter printed below (in reply to letters from the undersigned dated January 15, 1931), that they approve of these offers and will recommend to their customers the exchanges thereunder.

Holders desiring to accept these offers must deposit their debentures or their preferred stock with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, 11 Broad Street, New York City, Depositary. Interest coupons maturing March 1, 1931, on debentures should be detached prior to deposit and retained for presentation in the usual course when due.

The offers will expire at the close of business on April 16, 1931, unless extended by the undersigned for a period or periods not exceeding sixty days thereafter.

Very truly yours,
ASSOCIATED GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY,
By H. C. HOPSON,
Vice-President and Treasurer.

ASSOCIATED GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY,

January 15, 1931.

Gentlemen:

We acknowledge receipt of your letters of January 15, 1931, notifying us that you propose to offer to the holders of 5% Gold Debentures, Series A, due September 1, 1953, and 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation the privilege of exchanging their holdings in such Debentures and Preferred Stock, respectively, for your Convertible 5% Gold Debentures, due 1950, on a par for par basis, and for your $6 Dividend Series Preferred Stock on a share for share basis, respectively, upon the terms, subject to the conditions and based on the facts stated in your letters and accompanying documents.

As Bankers who participated in the original offering of the Debentures and the Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation, we have given the question of the advisability of these exchanges careful consideration, and this is to inform you that we approve the proposed offers and will recommend to our customers the exchange of their holdings of Debentures and Preferred Stock of Rochester Central Power Corporation under said offers.

Very truly yours,

Vice President Is Honored at Two Functions

Mr. Curtis With Hostess Guest of Padillas, Mrs. Dimock.

YESTERDAY was a gala day for Vice President Curtis, and his sister and official hostess, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, who were the guests of honor at two fetes, one a dinner given by the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. Padilla at the embassy last evening, and the other a luncheon, with Mrs. Henry F. Dimock as hostess in her spacious home on Scott Circle.

The parties yesterday initiated a final flurry of formal entertaining, which will be brought to close by Ash Wednesday and the advent of the Lenten season, when small, unofficial fetes will be the order of the day.

The Padillas, however, have a penchant for entertaining on Sunday evening, possibly feeling that the day is less apt to be given over to other parties. At any rate they have chosen Sundays for official fetes many times during the season.

Their guests last night included the Ambassador of Cuba and Mme. Ferrara; Mrs. Arthur M. Hyde, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Johan Beck-Friis; the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Count Roncalli.

Also Mrs. Thomas Birch, widow of the former Minister to Portugal; Mlle. Bianca Huerta, sister-in-law of the Minister of Ecuador; Mr. Edward Everett Gann, Count de Montefuerte, Counselor of the Spanish Embassy; the Commercial Counselor of the Embassy and Mme. Calderon, and the son and daughter of the Ambassador and Mme. Padilla, Mr. Ramon Padilla and Mlle. Rosa Padilla.

Mrs. Dimock entertained a company of twenty at luncheon, including the Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann.

Ambassador to Poland Entertains at Dinner.

Mr. John N. Willys, American Ambassador to Poland, and Mrs. Willys entertained at a brilliant dinner last week at their palatial home, which is the Embassy in Warsaw. A group of distinguished guests, including members of the Diplomatic Corps and Polish society, attended. Following the dinner members of the younger set in Warsaw arrived to hear the colored band of American Negroes, who had come specially from Paris for the occasion.

Fashions in Women . . have changed

IT used to be fashionable to be stupid about money matters. Women especially weren't supposed to understand them. Those who did pretending not to, for it was stylish to get a headache over figures.

But the silly little thing, who was too nice to ask prices a few years ago, is decidedly old-fashioned now. The modern woman takes pride in getting her money's worth.

The fashionable woman of today is a keen, shrewd buyer. She can pick as good a bargain in a grocery store as her husband can in his office. She's in the business of keeping house . . . And, more often than not, she's a steady A&P customer.

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE eight broadcasting stations which Chief Examiner Ellis A. Yost will recommend for selection by the Federal Radio Commission to complete the quota of 50,000-watt stations will be announced tomorrow or Wednesday.

While admittedly not in sympathy with this plan, Mr. Yost was instructed to prepare the list after the commission had remanded the original report which recommended that all cleared channel stations be permitted to use 50,000 watts power.

The longest radio telephone conversation yet recorded between ship and shore was carried on between the steamship Belgenland, which is making a round-the-world cruise, and is now near Shanghai, and London, a distance of more than 7,000 miles.

The results of this conversation with the Belgenland, according to the International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation, show the feasibility of radio telephone from ship to shore in any part of the world.

IF George W. Harris, internationally famous photographer, reminisces tomorrow night as expected, it will be a trip behind the scenes, for few men have had more intimate association with a greater number of celebrities.

Twenty-six years ago Mr. Harris and Mrs. Ewing, both Californians, if memory serves us correctly, came to Washington and started the firm which is now known most everywhere.

The twenty-sixth anniversary of Harris & Ewing will be celebrated by a special broadcast from Station WRC at 6:15 tomorrow evening.

WRVA, Richmond, will devote a half-hour (8:30 p. m.) to a program for the alumni, College of William and Mary.

Mabel Garrison, coloratura soprano, will inaugurate a series of programs to be broadcast exclusively from WBAL tomorrow evening, 8:30. Miss Garrison is a native of Baltimore.

RETURNING from the West Indies, Sam Pickard, vice president of Columbia, says the only important thing he did during the trip was to acquire some valuable ideas on fancy loafing.

Will Rogers will speak in the Palmolive Hour Wednesday.

Effective tomorrow, the weekly talks by Frederic William Wile will be heard over the CBS from 7 to 7:15 p. m., instead of 7:30 to 7:45 p. m. Whether WMAL will be able to carry them at this time is still uncertain.

DEE SHANNON, impersonator, will be an added feature to WOL's program Wednesday afternoon.

The broadcasters have finished counting their 1930 mail. Last year the Columbia net work received 1,027,046 letters at the New York headquarters. This compared with 416,069 in 1929.

More than 2,000,000 letters were received by the National Broadcasting Co. from the radio audience in 1930, an increase of 1,000,000 over 1929.

A sermon by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman on the significance of the Lenten season will be broadcast during an Ash Wednesday service direct from the Washington Cathedral.

ANOTHER reader complains of the police radio station:

"I complained to the Radio Commission and received advice to secure wave traps or other gadgets or what-have-you, also to have my set properly installed, &c. I have just invested about $175 for the latest model of a well-known make, so most likely will have to have the circuit changed according to the Radio Commission.

"Hope your column will have something further to say on this subject and I am sure that its influence may help to clear up the harmonic that is causing many listeners so much annoyance."

Monday Evening Club Plans Annual Dinner

The thirty-fifth annual dinner of the Monday Evening Club will be held tonight at the Willard Hotel. A program of entertainment and music has been arranged, with Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, New York, acting as toastmaster.

Included on the program of speakers are Senator Alban W. Barkley, Kentucky, who will deliver an address on "A Senator Looks at Washington," and Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau, who will speak on "The White House Conference and the City of Washington." Invocation will be offered by Dr. Thomas E. Green, director of the speakers' service of the American Red Cross. Mrs. Walter S. Ufford, president of the club, will preside. Dancing, beginning at 10 o'clock, will conclude the program.

Aquamarine Wins Favor.

Paris, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Aquamarine blue is beginning to replace turquoise in the affections of the smartest Parisians. Under a full length wrap of black breitschwanz, Mme. Revel wears an afternoon frock of pale aquamarine crepe. Her felt beret of the same shade is finished across the front with a wide band of feathers matching in tint.

Dare Interprets the Mode

A chic and youthful brown tweed mixture with dark brown leather belt and collar, and dark brown buttons. (Courtesy of the Maison Heim, Paris.)

Paris, Feb. 15.

HATS that match the costume in fabric, but contrast it in color, are being sponsored by several of the leading couturiers for the coming summer. And it is used in this manner * * * sometimes the band of a straw hat is the same material as the dress with which it is worn, another time a soft bow of the material only is used on the hat. This, by the way, is a very popular form of trimming on straw hats.

And then either Molyneux or Patou, I forget which, has a heavy linen hat with eyelet embroidery, with a white linen dress also eyelet embroidered. And this reminds me of a perfectly adorable tie-on bonnet from Agnes of heavy red and brown barred linen on a cream colored background. The hat looks simply like a big square tucked in at the back, with one corner cut off around the face like a brim.

Sometimes a straw hat is faced with material to match the dress. And very often the whole hat is made of fabric and matches some of your summer dresses and contrasts with others.

* * * *

Now you just know you never had enough boudoir slippers in your life, because you know no woman ever did have! But you can now, because you can make them from our illustrated leaflet, which is ready for you this week. Dare says that she walked all over Paris looking for boudoir slipper ideas that you could make at home, and found them, what's more. So now you can have Parisian boudoir slippers yourself, and have all the fun of making them and matching them to everything you've got. When you send your stamped, self-addressed envelope, mail it to the Dare Department of The Washington Post.

* * * *

There's just something about Heim coats! Look at the interesting details and the youthful chic of the tweed one I illustrated for you today, with its leather belt and brown, flat-fur collar * * * it was brown tweed, of course.

* * * *

Jenny adores what is called "lingerie" touches in French. And they are so in keeping with her super-youthful models, these fresh, little touches of this or that in lawn or organdie or lace or braid at the neck and wrists of a dress. I think the expression "lingerie" touches is very appropriate, don't you? Because lingerie certainly sounds so much more than collar and cuff set.

* * * *

Agnes started the idea, and now everybody does it * * * rolls the brim of a knitted hat around the head just like children used to roll a knitted stocking hat made out of stocking, remember?

Knitted things are all rolled this winter, and there is a green sweater and hat from Hermes Paris Shop sketched for you in the corner, with white, green, black and red in the rolled part only.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Her Own Way.

PATTY has a strange idea of love. Patty loves a man "more than life"—although she does not state whose life. She wants no one but him. Can love no one but him. "However, we are going to part as he refuses to agree to let me always have my own way regardless of the circumstances involved."

Now, in our opinion, what Patty wants is a lay figure of some sort of an amiable idiot to whom all issues are the same and none worth discussion. What worth-while man is going to agree to become a spineless instrument devoid of will or judgment and what woman could endure a lifetime of such a man's society?

Humans are atrocious creatures. Consider this spectacle of Patty. A fallible human being attempting to claim omniscience or at least the insufferable audacity of demanding that however mistaken, her way prevail. If there be greater conceit than that of the individual who believes himself further right we have never encountered it. And as for that one who goes further and says in effect, "I may not be right but I will not budge for any one"—words are inadequate. Yet Patty calls her man a selfish old thing because he is shocked at her effrontery.

Read Patty's letter and learn about women from her!

Dear Frances McDonald: You can not help me I suppose, for it is a man's everlasting selfishness. He is the only man I can love. In fact, I love him more than life; however, we are going to part, as he has a queer idea of love. My parents have always given me everything I wanted. I could never be happy if I were being crossed all the time and opposed. He does that. At last he asked me to marry him. I was so unearthly happy I did not know what to do. Of course I said yes and everything was lovely for an hour. Then I told him that if we were to be happy he must agree to stop trying to run things and must agree to give me my own way in everything regardless of any circumstances involved—such as his ideas or his family's wild ideas. (They came over in the ark.)

He just went right up in smoke. The selfish old thing. He said he would continue to do his own thinking, even if he had to remain a bachelor to do it. He just loves to stop people doing things. He loves to tell you you have eaten enough or danced enough or had enough cigarettes. A born spoilsport. Mother was against him from the start. She said he seemed to her a very positive type and a girl was happier with a more jovial type. Father never crosses mother. I never heard dad say anything but "all right" to mother, no matter what she asked. But this old Simon Legree of mine just loves to take that "Oh-no-you-don't" air and make you fairly seethe.

I love him. I want to marry him. But I want to be sure that our marriage will be happy. And it will not unless he agrees to let me alone. I will not interfere with him and he can not try to decide things for me. When I marry I want more freedom—not less. And I do not want any official fun spoiler to take the joy out of life. He has not tried to see me since. Just told me if I came to my senses to let him know. Putting it right up to me. Mother says to forget him and marry a man who will be more simple to understand. How can I when I just love him to death and can not stand any other man?

PATTY.

And so Patty must decide whether she wants her cake or does not. Whether she wants her way or her man. Whether she wants a husband or a door mat. There are plenty of "simple" men to be had. But who wants them?

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF February 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m. and from 5 p. m. to 7:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9:45 p. m.

The planetary aspects of February 16 indicate a condition of restlessness, prudence counsels sticking to routine, until more settled influences prevail. Avoid, if possible, all litigation, and be careful not to try and "bite off more than you can chew."

Children born on this February 16 will emerge from a youthful period of indolence into an adulthood of industry. They will, as men and women, have strong, self-reliant characters and become leaders of those circles in which they move and have their being.

If your birthday is February 16, you are fired with an ardent and unquenchable ambition to "get there." You also possess the unflagging spirit of industry which, given equality of other conditions, will make your dreams come true. The one drawback to their realization is poor judgment. You either waste your energies in a field of endeavor no longer profitable, or try something for which you are entirely unfitted. Your failures do not, however, discourage you, and the Fates decree that, sooner or later, you will "hit the nail on the head," and capture success.

You are extremely self-confident, and disregard all advice. It must be said, though, that when your plans "gang aglee," you never "pass the buck" but accept responsibility and uncomplainingly bear consequences. You are intelligent, but have a one-track mind, and until your mental train is derailed, you pursue the same route, regardless of the condition of the roadbed.

You are very companionable and a good mixer. Your friends are legion. Your disposition is pleasing, your sympathies are wide and generous. Destiny has in store for you many ups and downs, but, ultimately, you will achieve some, if not all, of your early ambitions.

Successful people born February 16:

Phineas P. Quimby, mental scientist.

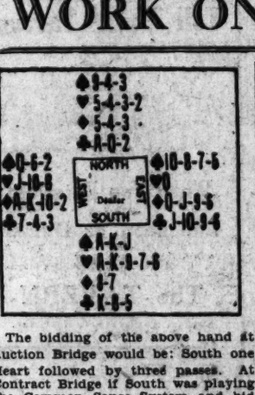
WORK ON BRIDGE



The bidding of the above hand at Auction Bridge would be: South one Heart followed by three passes. At Contract Bridge if South was playing the Common Sense System and bid only one Heart, he would miss a game contract, as West, North and East would pass. South has five high-card tricks and two low-card tricks, so a bid of two Hearts is more than justified; and North would be strong enough to jump to three. Then South having one high-card trick more than the minimum indicated by his bid of two, would bid four.

The hand was played at a number of tables at Contract and all reached the right declaration, but some missed the play. At all tables three rounds of Diamonds were led, South ruffing the third. South then led the Ace and King of trumps which left a good trump in the West hand and assured at least one more trick for the adversaries. At this stage of the game there were three methods of play open to Declarer—two of them wrong and one right.

If South led a Heart to trick 6 and put West in the lead, West would lead a Club through dummy's Ace-Queen and the Declarer eventually would lose a Spade and consequently fail to go game. If, after drawing two trumps, Declarer put dummy in with a Club and finessed Spades, he would lose the finesse and game; but if, after locating a good Heart in the West hand, Declarer led three rounds of Clubs and then put West in with a trump, West must lead a Spade or a Diamond, or a Club if he has the thirteenth. If the Diamond or the Club, Declarer can ruff in one hand while he discards a Spade from the other; if a Spade it will be up to South's Ace-King-Jack. So any lead that West can make assures game for Declarer.

It will not affect the result if West has less than three Clubs and ruffs the second of third rounds in such case his lead of either a Diamond or a Spade would give Declarer game.

SARATOGA CHOPS EN CASSEROLE.

(Bureau of Animal Industry.)

Saratoga chops are cut from the shoulder of lamb. They are somewhat less regular in shape than loin or rib chops, but are of excellent flavor. A particularly good way of cooking them is suggested by the bureau:

6 Saratoga chops, 1 inch thick.
6 slices bacon.
1 cup celery, chopped.
1 green pepper, chopped.
1 onion.
Salt.
Pepper.

Wrap the edge of each chop in a slice of bacon and fasten with a toothpick. Brown the chops on all sides in a hot skillet, transfer to a casserole, and cover with the mixture of celery, green pepper, onion, chili sauce, water and seasonings. Cover closely and cook in a slow oven (300 F.) for an hour, or until the lamb is tender. Remove the toothpick skewers carefully before serving so that the bacon will stay around the chops. Serve hot in the casserole.

Alabama's honey crop for the last year was valued at $450,000 by State college officials.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

DO'S AND DON'TS FOR FEBRUARY GARDENERS.

THIS is a good time to prune grapes, though you may also do it next month. All ornamental trees can now be pruned.

Should your lilacs be attacked by any scale disease, this is the month to get our your lime-sulphur and give the bushes a thorough spraying.

This is also a good time to start sweet-pea seed in pots or flats in the house. If you have a cold frame, it will provide an excellent place to keep the flats or pots. Use fairly light soil in the pots, this makes the transplanting easier.

Late February is a good time to transplant ferns or other foliage plants which are now starting to make growth. As a rule, the plants, due to the lengthening days, start into growth after the middle of the month.

Do not overwater your amaryllis until the flower stem is beginning to show signs of growth.

Gladiolus bulbs and dahlia tubers ought to be looked over several times during the winter to make sure that they are not shriveling or being attacked by destructive mildew.

When a warm, moist day comes along, set your house plants outdoors on a window ledge or porch for a few hours. They will benefit by the fresh air and dampness.

Do not forget that overwatering is a frequent cause of sour soil in the indoor garden. The surest way to avoid it is to set the pots in shallow water and let the soil soak it up gradually, then remove from the water.

A cool, fine spray of water applied several times a week will benefit your foliage plants. If it can be supplemented by a few hours in a steam-filled bathroom, so much the better.

Heavy, clinging snow often breaks evergreen branches if allowed to remain on them. You should remove it before real damage is done. Many of the winter birds welcome the shelter of a pile of pine or oak branches in some secluded, sunny nook.

Keep the soil in the pots of your house plants quite loose. Be sure to remove all dead or dying leaves or flowers from your primroses.

The Life Story of Gen. Wood

By HERMANN HAGEDORN

CHAPTER XLIV.

"We have got a hard job ahead of us," Gen. Wood wrote a friend shortly after the conclusion of the Republican national convention in 1920. "The main thing now is to consider the best interests of the country. It is no time for personal regrets."

The first consideration, clearly, was the overthrow of the Democrats. Earnestly, Wood advised his friends to put aside their personal grievances and work for the success of the Republican ticket. To the Republican leaders he talked bluntly. If they wanted the support of the progressive elements who had backed his candidacy, they would have to give them recognition. The campaign could not be successful unless the men who had fought and won the battles in the primaries were given representation and authority. It was ludicrous, Wood said to Ogden Reid, publisher of the New York Tribune, to talk of good government and a return to constitutional principles, and place the direction of the campaign in the hands of men like Jake Hamon and Harry Daugherty.

In response to an invitation from Harding, Wood went to Marion, Ohio, where the presidential nominee was dramatizing the return to the good old days by emulating McKinley's "front porch campaign."

Delays His Policies.

"He professed to be in accord with me on the basic policies," Wood wrote in his diary of July 11. "Said that a strong pressure was being put upon him to announce some of his Cabinet in advance, notably myself. He said he did not feel that he could do it now without making many enemies."

Harding and his managers importuned Wood to take an active part in the campaign, even to resigning from the Army if he could in no other way secure the necessary freedom of action and speech.

"Please know, my dear general, Harding wrote, "that I feel this enterprise to be quite as much yours as mine, and I want you to help put it over and feel that you have full responsibility now and will have your full share of the same responsibility in case we are charged with authority."

There were rumors that Harding intended to make Wood Secretary of State or Secretary of War. Early in September Harding returned his visit, but brought none of the rumors to earth.

"What Hoover by appointment and had about two hours' talk with him," Wood noted in his diary. "He is supporting Harding, but feels very unhappy and uncertain over the conduct of affairs, especially on account of the changes and apparent attitude on the League of Nations. Says that this situation as to future activity is about the same as mine."

Kept Them Dangling.

As President-elect Harding continued to keep them dangling.

Shortly before his inauguration, Harding asked Wood whether he would accept the post of Governor-General of the Philippines. Conditions in the Islands were chaotic owing to the lax administration of Francis Burton Harrison, who had been Governor-General under President Wilson, and there was a question whether any one could repair the damage which had been done. Wood suspected an effort to send him to a new exile. Stimson was indignant at the offer, and wrote Wood that Root, too, thought it a "damned insult," an attempt to continue the Wilson policy of sidetracking Wood.

Frank McCoy and Gordon Johnston, who were with Wood at Fort Sheridan, agreed with most of his other friends that the post at Manila would be infra dig. Wood thought otherwise. "One is never too prominent or too big to do any job that is of real importance to the Nation," he said. "If I felt that the situation was urgent, I should feel under an obligation to go." But he was aware of no urgency.

Two days after Harding's inauguration Weeks, the new Secretary of War, directed Wood to come to Washington.

At luncheon in the White House the new President once more pressed upon Wood the needs of the Philippines. Wood could not question his sincerity. Harding knew, it happened, rather more of Philippine affairs than most American public men, having been chairman of the Senate committee on territories and outlying possessions, and knew the full extent of the economic debacle in the Philippines. He was not a man of profound intelligence; he had little imagination and lacked altogether the political sagacity objectively to appraise personalities and motives; but he had a certain almost school-boyish ardor—only inadequately guarded from attack—to do nobly this colossal job which had been thrust into his hands. Wood told him that he could not accept the governorship, but would go to the Islands on a mission of investigation and submit a frank report on conditions as he found them.

Thankless Job Ahead.

"We have a rather thankless job ahead of us," Wood wrote Mrs. Douglas Robinson, "but we are going to do our best to make an absolutely honest, fair and frank report * * * I told Mr. Harding I thought the best service I could do would be to make this investigation and give him a report on which he could act with confidence, a report which would give credit for what had been done, while stating conditions as they are."

The mission, when it set forth early in April, 1921, had two heads instead of one, with W. Cameron Forbes, Harrison's predecessor in the Philippines, as the second member. The purpose of the mission, the Secretary of War pointed out, was to determine, in the face of conflicting declarations, the actual facts regarding the character of the government which the Filipinos were conducting.

Once more Corregidor, the familiar harbor, a battleship firing a salute, the Pasig River, * * * Manila. * * * A silent, waiting crowd.

There was utter silence as Wood came down the gangplank.

"It was so still," wrote an American woman, Eleanor Egan, observing the scene, "that the fut-fut of soldiers' hands on gun stocks as they brought their rifles to salute was a thing to make cold shivers run all over me."

Behind Wood came Forbes, distinguished and beloved, and behind Forbes the dignitaries who had met them at the quarantine. The guard of honor stood at salute in a silence that was tremulous with emotion. Suddenly the leader of the constabulary band—all Filipinos—lifted his baton and from 80 instruments burst the first notes of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Patriotic Renaissance.

"I tell you," wrote Mrs. Egan afterward, "it was the most dramatic thing anybody ever saw. Instantly the American flag came to stand for all it had ever stood for. Instantly American pusillanimity gave way to American strength. Instantly American shame gave way to American pride. Instantly the whole atmosphere was changed. Real American representatives had arrived. I am not particularly emotional, but I had lived through so much that had gone before, and I don't mind saying that I just put my head down where I stood and frankly wept."

The mission was installed at Malacanan, the Governor General's palace. The American colony gave an audible sigh of relief and expectation. The Filipino leaders looked worried.

They had reason. For eight years Quezon and Osmena had, in effect, been the government of the Philippines. They were able men, as apt as an Irishman in the intricacies of the political game, with the uncanny astuteness of the Oriental in devising subtle stratagems. Quezon was president of the Philippine Senate, a plunger and a demagogue, adroit, entirely fearless, and, unless rumor lied, not overscrupulous. Osmena's smooth, serene, almost benign countenance symbolized fitly the contrast of the man himself to his tempestuous companion in politics. He, the speaker of the Philippine House, was a person of wealth and education with a background of cultivation on the side both of his Filipino father and Chinese mother; a singularly astute politician; but a gentleman whose word, it was said, was as good as his bond; shy, reluctant to face opposition, but at bottom courageous and determined; a diplomatist rather than a fighter; illimitably patient.

Harrison Easy Going.

Osmena and Quezon had been Gov. Gen. Harrison's familiars, guides and governors.

Long before Harrison—easy-going and complaisant—resigned and retired to Scotland, they had, indeed, reduced him to a figurehead. They accomplished their end by a series of moves brilliantly conceived and executed. They increased the power of the department heads and passed laws requiring the governor general to perform his duties in many instances upon the recommendations of one or another of his subordinates or with their consent. They persuaded Harrison to establish a council of State, comprising the presiding officers of both houses of the Legislature and the secretaries of the executive departments, to "advise the governor general on matters of importance concerning the welfare of the country."

The governor general presided over it, but the majority ruled, and, since the secretaries were all creatures of Osmena and Quezon, there could be no question where the control lay. Through the speaker of the Assembly, Osmena, and the president of the Senate, Quezon, both members of the council, the Legislature thus quietly usurped the executive power. These two men already controlled the Legislature, and, therefore, through the council, became to all intents and purposes, save for one troublesome prerogative remaining to the governor, the undisputed rulers of the island.

That prerogative was the voting control of the corporations which had been framed when the government—in effect, Osmena and Quezon—had embarked on the troubled seas of industry and finance. The two politicos were equal to the need, placing the voting power in the hands of a committee of three, later known as the board of control, consisting of the governor general and the presiding officers of the two chambers of the Legislature. The Filipinos stood together and the American governor general was outvoted upon every point. It was a very simple device, worthy of the Oriental mind behind the bland benignity of Sergio Osmena.

Osmena Real Dictator.

In all these moves, Osmena was the chief and Quezon his lieutenant; an ambitious, restive lieutenant, dusting himself for the crown. Osmena wore the purple with a deceptive simplicity. Under the pressure of political exigency, Quezon subsequently revealed how absolute Osmena's power was. It was he who controlled legislation; it was he who, for all that Harrison sat in the governor general's chair, directed the administration of public affairs. Matters which he approved became law; matters which he did not approve did not become law. The department secretaries took their inspiration from Osmena, and were subject to his rule. The appointments which they proposed to the governor general were Osmena's appointments. Only Quezon himself was aware, of these recommendations before they were submitted to the governor general. But the legislature confirmed them without protest and without exception.

It was this brilliant little autocrat and the fiery demagogue who was at the same time his ally and his rival, who Wood knew, constituted the crux of his problem. At Malacanan, with Forbes, he talked to them bluntly. There must be a clear understanding from the start that they would all be frank with one another.

No Time for Indirection.

"I said * * * that * * * it was no time, in these days of world unrest, to deal in indirection," Wood wrote in his diary May 6, 1921. "It was generally admitted that they were the leaders of the people, and were able to carry through whatever policy they announced; that they very largely, represented the government, so far as effective power to do things was concerned, and that it was most important that we should deal with each other with entire frankness and candor."

The two politicians deprecated their influence with their people. They were in a humble mood. Both, indeed, seemed slightly dazed. They had cause for bewilderment. In order to forestall the intrusion of American capital they had thrust the government into high finance. They had organized a Philippine National Bank, purchased a railroad, a hotel and countless sugar centrals, organized a coal company and a cement company, juggled the reserves of the bank and the currency reserve funds of the Islands, losing in the process upward of $40,000,000. The financial foundations of the government they had so proudly conducted were rocking under their feet, and they had the feeling of helplessness which any earthquake engenders.

They gave Wood and Forbes to understand that they would place no obstacles in their path. The fact was that they were at the bottom of a well and welcomed any one who promised rescue.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS AGNES LYNE.

WHEN HE IS BORED.

Is your child one of those who follows his mother about the house constantly asking, "What shall I do now, mother? Please tell me, what shall I do?"

Does he constantly ask for favors, new toys, special privileges? Does he behave as if home was the dullest place in the world and constantly call on you to make life amusing?

If he does, it is a sign that he needs different treatment from you, different playthings—perhaps, and other play opportunities.

Children should be trained from the very first to play by themselves without depending constantly upon adult attention and approval of what they are doing.

They should have the sort of play materials which will occupy their imagination and encourage constructive interests which they may pursue independent of outside help. They should be alone for hours at a time.

As soon as they are old enough to enjoy the presence of other children, that is after the age of 2, they should have daily opportunity of being with children of their own age. The children should be left together with only such adult supervision as will prevent them from hurting each other.

If it is necessary for the child to play in the same room where his mother is busy, she can give him something to do which will give him the feeling that he is helping and accomplishing something of which he may be proud. He may help set the table, shell peas or cut out a few cookies of his own while his mother is baking.

Such treatment will not cause him to expect to be entertained, but will give him the pleasure of doing a task which has status in the adult world.

Radio Entertainer Will Meet Hoover

President, "Seth Parker" to Exchange Greetings; Show Set Tonight.

Two men whose names are bywords in this country will meet at the White House today for the first time. They are President Hoover and Phillips H. Lord, creator of "Seth Parker." Accompanying the delegation at the White House will be Homer Rodeheaver, famous song leader, and the Rev. Dr. Albert J. Lord, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Meriden, Conn., and father of the radio entertainer. The party of visitors will be heard in a charity recital tonight at Constitution Hall for the benefit of the Central Union Mission.

Some time during the day the two entertainers will visit the "shut-ins" at the Walter Reed and Tuberculosis Hospitals. Arrangements have been made by Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bennett of the Central Union Mission for a return visit March 2, when "Seth Parker" will bring his whole troupe for the program in Constitution Hall.

Melba's Condition Now Reported Dangerous

Sydney, N. S. W., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Dame Nellie Melba, who has been ill since early in November, was described today as being in a dangerous condition.

The noted singer, 72 years old, was found to be seriously ill November 4, when her ship, the liner Cathay, docked at Freemantle. For a time her physician forbade removal to land, but six days later she was taken to a Melbourne hospital and appeared to be greatly improved at that time.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—Coincidentally, the "5-year-old Coogan," Robert, is starting in pictures at the same age Jackie did and looks almost as Jackie did when he appeared in "The Kid" eleven years ago. Robert has the same sad, "lost" expression so characteristic of Jackie in those days.

ROBERT COOGAN

The role the youngest Coogan is playing came unexpectedly. A number of lads from 4 to 6 years had been interviewed and tested for the part of Sooky, Skippy's companion in the picture "Skippy," yet none was satisfactory.

A director saw Robert and insisted on having him. His parents were willing, but they never expected Robert to follow in Jackie's footsteps.

Young Robert doesn't take to acting with the youthful vigor Jackie did. To him it's all work and no play, and even the money he makes doesn't seem to count. He may become as serious-minded as Jackie; now he is more mischevious than the average 5-year-old.

The director was focusing the camera on Robert, who got fidgety and was nearly every place but within the range of the lens. The director, irritated, finally told him to stand still. What might have been an unpleasant day for Robert as well as the director was averted when he naively inquired:

"But isn't this a moving picture?"

Costly Wait.

A high priced and temperamental director was waiting. So also waited the star, more expensive, more temperamental.

Fifteen minutes had passed when a woman said, "All right, he's ready now."

The woman was nursing "him," 6 months old. Money or temperament mean absolutely nothing when a baby is hungry and won't act unless he is fed.

Unsung Heroes.

Unnamed movie workers suffer disappointments as well as the stars whose pictures are flops.

A third assistant director was assigned to provide 40 automobiles of the years 1915, 1916 and 1917 for a picture dating back to the opening years of the war. After nearly a week he rounded up the necessary vehicles. The scenes were taken, with the cars playing a prominent part in them.

But the part wasn't prominent enough. The picture was too long and the auto scenes were eliminated.

YOUR NAME IT MEAN? WHAT DOES

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Townsend" (also written "Townshend" and "Townend") occurs with great frequency in the earliest English records. It means "the end of the town," and indicates an original place of residence. In Lancashire and Yorkshire, even at the present time, some of the inhabitants say "at the street end" instead of "at the end of the street." In some early documents "Townsend" appears with the Latinized form "Ad finem villae." This name appears to be first recorded in the Hundred Rolls. A certain Goeffrey de le Tunesheude and a Henry atte Tunesende are mentioned in that important list of early English names.

The family names "Legg" and "Legge" are frequently the modern forms of the old Norse "Leggr." "Leggr" was an old personal name meaning "the spear-shaft." The same Scandinavian source has given the modern English word "leg." There is evidence that this name was sometimes first applied to persons who were lame or whose legs were otherwise abnormal. Old English documents frequently mention taverns, inns and stores which displayed the picture or image of a leg as a means of identification. Such signs were especially common before the shops of hosiers. Occasionally "Legg" and "Legge" are modern shortened forms of the Anglo Saxon personal names "Loedegar," meaning "national spear," or "Leodgard," which may be translated "national fence" or "national protection." Finally, as was explained in the preceding article of this series, the family names "Legg" and "Legge" frequently have the same source as "Lee," "Lea," and "Leigh." The Hundred Rolls mentions an Andrew Legge and a John de Leg.

FOOD FOR YOUNG BABIES.

EVEN young babies are able to digest and assimilate a considerable number of foods, provided the foods are clean and pure, and are properly prepared. Of course, mother's milk is the best food for a young baby. When this source of supply is not available clean, fresh cow's milk suffices very well. Milk powder, the canned milks, and the baby foods are good when properly used. These conclusions are based on a study of several hundred or thousand well babies cared for at the Berkeley Infant Welfare Center.

These records showed that, as a rule, babies began getting cereal in their sixth month. However, one healthy baby began eating a properly prepared cereal at 3 weeks of age. He thrived on it. Another began in the second month, and many were getting it in the fourth month.

Vegetables were given pureed. They were begun in the sixth month, as a rule. The first vegetables given were pureed spinach and carrots. Baked potato was not given earlier than the seventh month and the rule was not to give it until the eleventh month.

The breads given were mostly hard crackers. These were not given usually until the tenth month, though some babies were chewing crackers during the fourth month and others at the fifth.

The first meat given was bacon. The rule was to give bacon at thirteen months. However, some babies had fat meat as early as the fifth month. Liver was given at eleven months. Eggs were given in the eighth month, as a rule, though some babies had eggs as early as the fourth month. There are physicians who start babies on crackers, meats and eggs earlier than is the practice in this center.

Apple sauce and baked apple, free from peel and coarse fiber, are given at seven months. One baby had apple at five months; scraped raw, ripe apple was given at twelve months. Apricots at six months, custard at six months, and gelatin at ten. One baby six weeks old was given ice cream. Cod liver oil and orange juice were started very soon after birth. A few babies were compelled to discontinue one or the other. The sugars added to milk were used in the order named: Malt sugar, corn sugar and milk sugar. In recent years corn sugar is used much more frequently than the others.

Daily sun baths, begun at somewhere near one month, and kept up at all seasons, were a prominent feature in keeping these babies well. The climate made this possible.

The babies doubled weight by the fifth month and trebled it by the twelfth. The gains, by quarters of the year, were first, 5 pounds; second, 3.25; third, 2.15; fourth, 3.25. In the first six months the gain in height was 5.4 inches; in weight, 8.7 pounds. In the second six months, gain in height was 3.3 inches, and in weight, 5.7 pounds.

IT IS EASILY POSSIBLE.

A Reader writes: Is it possible that the presence of a police dog could aggravate a case of eczema?

REPLY.

It is easily possible. That could be the cause of the trouble. There are many kinds of eczema and many causes for it.

NATS' CHANCES BOLSTERED BY STRONGER RESERVES

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Dave Lumianski, of New Bedford, Mass., manager of the Negro prize fighter, Al Brown, propounds an interesting idea in connection with the alleged desecration of a temple of art in Paris the other evening.

Al Brown defeated Nick Bensa, a Frenchman, in a ten-round contest which appears to have been not so ferocious, but the indignation of the customers was not due to the familiar complaint of insincerity on the part of the athletes. It was conceded, without argument, that they had done their best, or worst, but the patrons, who carried on a subdued hissing throughout the contest, were protesting because the pugilists have invaded the Salle Pleyel, where Paderewski, Kreisler, Challapin and others had been heard in times past. When the contest was over, Mr. Lumianski spoke in rebuttal.

"What are they squawking about?" he demanded. "They say they want art, and I will say that Al Brown is a much greater artist in his line than some of the ukulele pickers, piano destroyers and human hoot-owls who worked in the same joint before."

I am inclined to agree with Mr. Lumianski that the lovers of music too readily defy musicians. The fact that Paderewski, Kreisler and so forth once performed in the joint referred to would not seem to be sufficient reason to honor the place forever. Common tourists nowadays may sleep for a dollar a night in a thousand of the very rooms that George Washington slept in along the hot-dog-hooked-rug-and-shore-dinner trail in New England; it certainly would be financially impracticable to fence off and paint with gilt and maintain inviolate forever all the opera houses and town halls in the United States in which all the great artists have appeared.

MUSICIANS READILY DEIFIED

Anyway, who then would decide which artists were sufficiently great to merit this distinction, and wouldn't there always be some who would want to make shrines of all the theaters where Chic Sale and Eva Tanguay played? Otis Skinner, who has been no ham himself in the show business, must have played in a thousand temples, and Mansfield, Sothern and Louis Mann in thousands more.

One of the shrines of art in New York is the old Manhattan Opera House, erected by the late Oscar Hammerstein, who had a curious genius for selecting impossible sites for his monuments to the opera. Many great artists of music performed in the Manhattan Opera House, but by far the most memorable and, I might even go so far as to say, the most artistic program ever produced there was discovered by a herd of wrestlers in the fall of 1915, when the famous Masked Marvel was current.

A gentleman by the name of Samuel Rachman led his herd into town and stabled them at the Manhattan Opera House for a series of championship matches in Greco-Roman wrestling. At the end of a week, however, the receipts were so meager that the artists, including Ed (Strangler) Lewis, Wladek Zbysko and Alex Aberg, were reduced to rations of synthetic vegetables out of cornucopias and papier mache fried chickens, all from the operatic property rooms.

But then, with startling unexpectedness, one night there arose in a box close to the stage a mysterious stranger in a dress suit who yelled down at the drowsing customers concentrated in the first few rows, "This tournament is a fake. My man is barred by the management, and he can throw any man in the world!"

MYSTERY MAN ON SCENE

The customers blinked, and the management, with a great show of indignation and vigor, which may not have been entirely sincere, ejected the mysterious stranger. But he returned to disturb the slumbers of the customers the next night, and, on the third, upon his interruption, Mr. Rachman, the owner of the herd, demanded: "Well, we will call your bluff. Produce your man."

Shields Bows To Van Ryn In 5 Sets

Ninth Ranking Player Rallies to Defeat No. 2 Star.

Philadelphian Wins Last Two Sets by 6—0 and 6—1.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, Davis Cup star, captured the Heights Casino invitation tennis singles title today by conquering young Frank Shields, of New York, in a five-set final round battle. The scores were 6—2, 1—6, 2—6, 6—0, 6—1.

Shields, although ranked as number 2 by the United States Lawn Tennis Association yesterday, could not withstand the brilliant brand of tennis put up by Van Ryn today. Van Ryn was ranked at number 9 by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The New Yorker rallied strongly to capture the second and third sets, but could not carry his attack into the following two and won only one game in them.

Van Ryn Wins First Set.

Van Ryn marched through the first set without any trouble, lost control long enough to allow Shields to capture the second and third and then turned loose a devastating barrage of shots to win the fourth and even the count.

The fifth and deciding set found Van Ryn still in complete control of the situation. The Philadelphian's fine back court play coupled with his accurate and rapid-fire return of Shields' service kept the New Yorker on the defensive all the way and he could win only one game.

Shields then teamed up with Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., to win the doubles title in a hard-fought, five-set match with Perrine Rockefellow and Herbert L. Bowman, of New York. The scores were 6—4, 5—7, 7—9, 6—4, 6—3.

Blue Ridge Leaguers Join Independent Clubs

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 15.—Several former Blue Ridge League ball tossers are to be found on the rosters announced by independent clubs of this city following their annual meetings of reorganization. Consequently, in baseball circles, it is predicted that a faster brand of ball will be handed the fans in this section in 1931 than during any past season when Martinsburg was without a professional team.

Rube Orem, one of the former Blue Ridgers and also a former Baltimore Dry Docks hurler, has been named once more to manage Hose Company No. 5, rated one of the best aggregations in the Tri-State independent ranks for many years. He will have another one-time Blue Ridge man, Ray Edmonds, as his assistant, and expects to add the veteran Reggie Rawlings, leading hitter of the ridge loop for many campaigns, and Joe Brophy, erstwhile Eastern League, Eastern Shore League and Blue Ridge League player.

Arthur Woodring, regular catcher for the Martinsburg Club, of the Blue Ridge loop, for six seasons, has accepted the coaching post with the Interwoven Athletic Club, which will be managed by Jack Hardy, a veteran, and incidentally expects to take part in many games. Lawrence Parkinson, another local amateur veteran, has been named manager of Hose Company No. 4.

HURRICANE POLOISTS WIN.

Los Angeles, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The Hurricane Polo Team, from New York, won the Teddy Miller Cup play at the winter meeting at the Midwick Club today by defeating the Midwick four, 11 to 10, in an extra chukker game.

Baltimore Y. M. H. A. Five Beats Marines

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Feb. 15.—Recovering after a slow start, the Young Men's Hebrew Association Basket Ball quintet smothered the Quantico Marines under a 42-to-26 score this afternoon at the local Y court.

The Quantico cagers opened with a rush and romped out to a 6-to-lead before the Y. M. outfit began to click. But the Blue Star quintet steadied and pulled up on even terms at 6-all at the quarter and then opened a smart attack which carried them into a 24-to-8 advantage at half time.

With Denaberg and Rosenberg leading the offensive with a string of 21 points between them, the Y. M. H. A. squad had easy sailing. With a comfortable margin to work on, the second stringers took the floor and even then the local five battled the Marines on fairly even terms to close with a 10-point edge.

SHEA FIGHTS FRANCIS IN FEATURE

Pair Meet in Garden Friday; Miller in Two Bouts.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The boxing industry's "big moments" this week will come at New York, Philadelphia and Detroit.

Madison Square Garden's Friday night offering will pit Eddie Shea, Chicago featherweight contender, against Kid Francis, of Italy, in a ten-round bout. Shea, in the opinion of many competent critics, is the best 126-pounder in the business. Francis, since he graduated from the bantamweight ranks, has engaged in five battles and won them all.

Boss Battles Taylor Tonight.

At Philadelphia tomorrow night Benny Bass, junior lightweight champion, takes on the one-time Terre Haute terror, Bud Taylor, in the top ten-rounder. Ray Miller, Chicago southpaw, meets Gaston Lecadre, of France, in the semifinal and then jumps West for a bout with Johnny Jadick, of Philadelphia, at Detroit Friday night.

Bouts on the national schedule include:

MONDAY—At Philadelphia, Benny Bass, Philadelphia, vs. Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., junior lightweights, 10; Ray Miller, Chicago, vs. Gaston Lecadre, France, lightweights, 10; K. O. Phil Kaplan, Meriden, Conn., vs. Billy Algers, lightweights, 6; at Louisville, Frankie Wine, Butte, Mont., vs. Walter Pickard, Indianapolis, heavyweights, 10; at Cleveland, Phil Tobias, New York, vs. Mickey Cohen, Cleveland, bantamweights, 10.

TUESDAY—At Los Angeles, Billy Townsend, Vancouver, vs. Tod Morgan, Los Angeles, lightweights, 10; at Portland, Oreg., Gorilla Jones, Akron, Ohio, vs. Herman Ratzlaff, Minot, N. Dak., middleweights, 10; at Indianapolis, Tracy Cox, Indianapolis, vs. Babe Keller, Toledo, featherweights, 10.

WEDNESDAY—At Oklahoma City, Babe Hunt, Ponca City, Okla., vs. Paul Swiderski, Syracuse, N. Y., heavyweights, 10.

FRIDAY—At New York, Madison Square Garden, Eddie Shea, Chicago, vs. Kid Francis, Italy, featherweights; and Ralph Lenny, Jersey City, vs. Harry Carlton, Jersey City, lightweights, each 10; at San Francisco, Young Corbett, Fresno, vs. Paulie Walker, New York, welterweights, 10; at Detroit, Ray Miller, Chicago, vs. Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia, lightweights, 10.

Mackey, Ex-Dodger, To Pilot Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 15.—Leo Mackey, catcher with the Brooklyn Robins, a few seasons ago and a seasoned pilot in organized baseball, having had the reins at Flint, Mich., and Chambersburg, Pa., has been signed to manage the Cumberland Colts in the Middle Atlantic League for the 1931 season. He had been placed with Chambersburg by the New York Yankees and Paul Krichell, the Yankee scout, recommended him to the Colts. He will play regularly with the locals besides being pilot. In 50 games at Chambersburg, he hit 351.

AZTECS WIN AGAIN.

The Aztecs took a hard-fought battle from the Shoe Repair tossers yesterday afternoon by a 27-to-20 count. Warner, of the Shoemen, with six field goals and one foul, led both teams in scoring. Gardner starred for the winners.

Yale Feature Grid Date Shared

Princeton, Harvard to Alternate, Is Announcement.

Bennie Friedman Is Added to Coaching Staff.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 15 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Yale announced today, after last night's meeting of the board of athletic control, that Harvard and Princeton would alternate as final opponents for Yale elevens on the gridiron hereafter and also the selection of the 1931 football coaching staff.

The former announcement is one of the greatest upheavals that Yale has had in the last 30 years. Since 1899 Yale and Harvard have clashed on the gridiron in the final game of the season and the meeting of the two football teams has become probably the best known athletic event of the year.

Princeton and Yale will play their game on the Saturday after Thanksgiving this year and on alternate years thereafter this new plan will extend the Yale season one week, but the Elis will not play on the Saturday before the Harvard game. Therefore, Yale will have an eight-game schedule covering nine weeks.

Friedman Given Position.

After a week of meetings and selections the Yale board of control announced the football coaching staff for 1931. Benny Friedman, former Michigan star and last year's captain, coach and quarter back of the New York Giants, professionals, was signed as assistant coach to Mal Stevens, who was selected as head coach. Stevens is a Yale product. Charlie Comerford, rumored to be demoted from the varsity staff to become head coach of the freshmen, replacing Pat Osborne, has been reappointed a varsity end coach. Adam Walsh, as was expected, was reappointed as assistant coach. Walsh is a former Notre Dame star and captain of the famous "Four Horsemen" team at Notre Dame.

This is not the staff that was recommended by the graduate advisory committee to the board of control of the athletic association. It was the first time the board of control bucked the recommending committee and after last Monday's meeting it was obvious that the board members had failed to agree and postponed the announcement of the selections. Last night's meeting brought the agreement, or at least a compromise, of the matter with finality.

O'Connor Joins Staff.

Another Notre Dame star to break into the Yale coaching staff is Bucky O'Connor, of the 1930 varsity. O'Connor will have charge of the freshmen backs as assistant to Pat Osbourne.

Varsity—Dr. Stevens, Walsh, Friedman and Comerford.

Junior varsity—Raymond (Nucky) Pond, Waldo (Pirpo) Greene, Fay Vincent, Johnny Godman and Bob Hall.

Freshman—Pat Osbourne, Reggie Root, Stewart Scott and Paul (Buckly) O'Connor.

Root was coach of the University of Mexico in 1929 and 1930.

Mr. Cates, who was director of the athletics, issued the announcement in connection with the alternating schedule, said that all matters concerning the alternating schedule have been cleared up with Harvard. The invitation to Princeton to play in the alternating plan holds good for three years, and thereafter, "unless and until altered by mutual consent."

THIS LARGE GOLF BALL THERE USING IS A GOOD THING I THINK
YOU SAID IT! IT SHOULD HAVE BEEN INTRODUCED LONG AGO
IT WILL PENALIZE THE FEW EXPERTS AND GIVE THE DUFFER A BETTER CHANCE
THAT'S JUST THE WAY I FEEL ABOUT IT
IT WILL TAKE 5 OR 10 YARDS OFF THE GOOD PLAYERS DRIVE AND MAKE IT MUCH MORE DIFFICULT TO GET HOME IN TWO
ABSOLUTELY! AND IT WILL BE EASIER FOR THE DUFFER TO HIT WITH A BRASSIE ON THE FAIRWAY
IT'S ABOUT TIME THEY WERE PAYING A LITTLE ATTENTION TO THE DUFFER. HE'S THE BIRD WHO PAYS FOR ALL THESE EXPENSIVE GOLF CLUBS — NOT THE HANDFUL OF EXPERTS
THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT I'VE BEEN SAYING FOR YEARS
WE'LL DO BETTER WITH THE NEW BALL IN SAND TRAPS, THERE'S MORE OF A SURFACE TO HIT
YES, SIR! IT'S GOING TO CUT OUR SCORE DOWN A LOT
I DON'T KNOW HOW YOU FEEL ABOUT IT BUT I THINK THIS NEW GOLF BALL IS LOUSY
ABSOLUTELY! THE OLD BALL IS GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME. WHEN I HIT A GOOD SHOT I WANT IT TO TRAVEL

Little Chance Of Shift in Line-up

Kuhel, Harry Rice, Hargrave Likely to Aid Club.

(This is the seventh of a series of articles detailing the efforts of American League Clubs to strengthen in preparation for the 1931 season).

WASHINGTON NATIONALS.

MANAGER—Walter Johnson.
COACHES—Ed Gharrity, Nick Altrock, Al Schacht.
PITCHERS — Crowder, Marberry, Hardly, Jones, Liska, *Tauscher, *Peregory, *Fidler, right-handers; L. Brown, Burke, *Grimth, Fischer, southpaws.
CATCHERS — Spencer, Hargrave, *Kenna, *Bolton.
INFIELDERS—Judge, Kuhel, Myer, Hayes, Cronin, Bluege, McLeod, *Dashiell, *Jordan.
OUTFIELDERS—Manush, E. Rice, *H. Rice, West, Harris, *Clark, *Burns, *New men.
Note — Gharrity also is listed as catcher.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WITH the possible exception of one or two pitchers, Washington is not believed to have added any players capable of crowding last year's regulars out of the line-up in the coming race. However, indications are that the Nationals have been bolstered as regards reserve talent and, if the team gets the caliber of pitching it received in 1930, it should be right in the thick of the pennant fight from the opening gun.

The Nats' outstanding rookie, appears to be First Baseman Joe Kuhel, who showed rare promise after reporting to Manager Walter Johnson last season and who, many believe, is easily the best of the score or more who have come and gone while trying to dislodge the veteran, Joe Judge, from the doorway guardianship. With Kuhel on the job, the Nats will be well protected in case the regular is injured or goes into a slump.

Unless Baxter Jordan, an all-around player who hit .349 with Newark last season, upsets the dope, Jack Hayes, Kuhel and Wally Dashiell, the latter Chattanooga's star second sacker last season, will be the utility infielders. Jim McLeod, undoubtedly, will be sent away for seasoning.

Nats Better Fortified In Outfield.

The Nationals were in distress as regards flychasers last season, especially at the start, when Goose Goslin could not hit the size of his hat. This handicap seems to have been overcome, however, for Heinie Manush is sure to deliver, both afield and at bat; the veteran Sam Rice seems to be improving with age, while Sam West has just about convinced Manager Johnson that he can not be improved upon.

West had trouble with his throwing arm last season. At Chattanooga, where the Nats finished their spring training, his wing began bothering him but it responded to a short rest treatment. In the waning days of the season, Sam had more trouble and he has been resting his flipper ever since and the club physician believes it will be about normal again for the coming season. If it isn't, the Nats have Harry Rice, obtained on waivers from the Yankees, and Dave Harris ready to step in and plug the gap. The latter led all pinchhitters last season but his fielding is nothing to write home about.

The only other outfielders trying for berths are Tom Clark, brother of Earl Clark, of the Braves, and Leo Burns, a youngster signed a day or so ago on the recommendation of Shortstop Joe Cronin. Neither is expected to make the grade, this season, at least.

Club Protected Behind Bat.

Although the veteran catcher, Herold (Muddy) Ruel, will be missing, Roy Spencer, Ed Kenna and Bill (Pinky) Hargrave will give the Nats good protection behind the bat, while Cliff Bolton also may hang on. His case is a puzzling one. He is an atrocious fielder, but a natural hitter. He may be kept in a pinch-hitting capacity even if he fails to impress otherwise. Coach Patsy Gharrity will take him in hand in the hope of polishing up his workmanship as a receiver.

Fred Marberry, "Sad Sam" Jones, "General" Al Crowder, Irving Hadley, Ad Liska, Lloyd Brown and Bob Burke gave the Nationals the best mound staff in the league last season. All should be as good in 1931, while there is a likelihood of Hadley, Liska and Burke improving. Add to this the possibilities of Carl Fischer, International League southpaw, developing, or of Walter Taucher, Dallas veteran; Lynn Griffith, Western Association southpaw; John Peregory and Art Fidler, two tall right-handers from the Blue Ridge League, coming through, and it will be seen that Washington again should have a fine mound staff.

The Nationals' added utility strength and possible pitching improvement should give Manager Johnson a machine which, in the absence of more than its share of bad breaks, should click on all cylinders from start to finish.

Passing of Rickard, Depression, Politics, Fighters Blamed for "Dog Days" of Ring

Few Boxing Centers Unhit by Game's Tail Spin.

(NOTE—This is the first of a short series of stories on the condition of boxing throughout the country).

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Boxing, the sport of gladiators, has fallen into a full tail spin almost generally throughout the country. Except in scattered districts, promoters, critics, and the faithful themselves are sure of that.

But as to the whys and wherefores, the causes and effects—well, there's the rub, of a dozen different and contrasting opinions. They start from the radical view that boxers themselves are killing the game and that fisticuffs, as a big business died with the late Tex Rickard. They wind up with the common plaint of all harassed industry today—business depression.

A hasty survey of the weakened stock market indicates boxing has been beset by an increasing interest in professional wrestling and amateur matches, harassed by fighters who can fill arenas, but won't unless they get all the money their bouts can draw, dominated by politics and managerial cliques, and burdened by poor talent. Where these evils have been avoided, apparently, and prices scaled to fit the possibilities of shrunken pocketbooks, boxing has got along rather well.

Boxing Staggering Through.

Nowhere does there seem to be the conviction that professional sport of the rougher, body contacting kind, has lost its grip. Boxing seems to be staggering through a new phase of its existence, acclimating itself here and there, but failing in many places to adapt itself to new conditions and problems. In other centers promoters have weathered the major slump and see signs of good business ahead.

Down from the days of fights waged privately between the good 'un of one sporting gentleman and the protege of another, with only pride and the question of individual superiority plus a side wager at stake, down through the sheriff-evading times of the early heavyweights, the fights on barges and in secluded barns, into the field of respectability, boxing heretofore has moved steadily forward.

The fight game reached its crest with Tex Rickard, the tall, quizzical, shrewd Texan, who came out of the West with nothing but a dusty sombrero and an infinite capacity for showmanship to set himself up as the dictator of the boxing world, establish the game on a business basis and run a shoestring into millions of dollars. He made boxing the hobby of millionaires, interested the "best people," brought about the erection of the $5,000,000 Madison Square Garden and made it produce fine profits.

Richard Elevated Game.

Rickard vested boxing with the atmosphere of respectability it had always lacked, brought women to his fights in almost the same proportion as men, weeded out his ringside rows until the fulll-dressed personages, costly gowned and jeweled women there made it look like a section of the diamond horseshoe at the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera. He developed Jack Dempsey into the greatest of drawing cards. He approached $2,000,000 in gate receipts with the first Dempsey-Tunney fight at Philadelphia, and $3,000,000 with their return engagement in Chicago.

But even Tex Rickard could not hold the pace and when he died suddenly early in January of 1929 the tremendous thing he had built already was beginning to crumble. The last heavyweight title match he ever staged, Gene Tunney's defense against Tom Heeney, was a fiancial failure, and when Tex died it was revealed he had quietly disposed of almost all of his stock in the Garden.

It seemed for a while that old Tex had been wrong. The sympathetic impetus of his death helped make a success of the last match he arranged—Jack Sharkey's struggle with Young Stribling at Miami Beach, Fla., in February, 1929. Boxing amphitheaters that had risen in the wake of the Garden in Boston, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis and Cleveland were doing well enough. In New York, Madison Square Garden had a profitable year. Small clubs prospered.

Garden Stock Tumbles.

Then the decline set in. The Garden has abandoned for the time being its annual winter show in Florida. Garden stock has tumbled from a high of $37 to $5. Indoor fight crowds this year average 7,500. There hasn't been a single sell-out, whereas there used to be little else.

Boxing is in a weakened condition all along the Eastern seaboard, with one fairly bright spot in Philadelphia. Young Stribling has helped to ward off depression in the South, where the game is illegal in many States. The slump has hit the Southwest and the Pacific Coast, except for Portland, Oreg., where fighting lightheavies are in favor.

The brightest spot on the fistic map right now is the Midwest. Chicago staged fewer but better shows in 1930, a big year in Illinois. Cleveland and St. Louis were depressed.

But almost all of the affected districts report a healthy swing toward wrestling and amateur boxing. The faithful are turning away from poor matches, mediocre fighters, missing the guiding genius of another great promoter.

An old-time fighter and referee, peering in disgust at two clumsy warriors in the Garden, had this to offer:

"The game is going because the great fighters are going. No one learns to fight any more. It isn't what you know. It's whom you do know—in politics. Three rounds and they're through. Bah, Terry McGovern would have licked a room full of these heavyweights."

American "A" Soccer Team Wins in International Game

THE American Soccer Team, managed by Melvin Wilson and known as Team "A," yesterday won the first game of the international series sponsored by the Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association by a 2-0 score before a sizable crowd on the Silver Spring field.

Team "B," managed by Richmond Bowie, put up a creditable battle, holding the stronger first team to a scoreless tie in the first period and preventing a counter until the final five minutes of play.

When a scoreless tie seemed imminent, Team "A" was given a penalty kick which was converted by Henry Irving. Shortly before the close of the game Irving headed the sphere into the net after Knight centered beautifully from a corner. Bowie and the Collins brothers put up a great game for the losers while Harding, Knight, Irving and Fred Wilson were the heroes of the winning club.

Cleveland Pros Outclass Skinker Eagle Five, 41-25

ALTHOUGH defeated by the Cleveland Favorite Knits, 41 to 25, yesterday afternoon at the Silver Spring Armory before 550 persons, the Skinker Eagles can derive all sorts of satisfaction from the fact that the quintet which conquered them is by far the finest professional team to show its wares here this season.

Ralph Bennie, who has been showing the way for the Eagles in every game, was able to face the Ohioans for less than ten minutes because of an infected tooth, which made him too fil to continue further. His absence was a severe blow to the Skinkers.

The advertised feature of the game was "Shorty" Gill, 7-foot 4-inch center for the Clevelanders. As far as actual playing was concerned, however, Gill appeared very mediocre and was yanked after playing about eight minutes.

Led by "Pug" Mahoney, former Cleveland Rosebium star, the Favorite Knits outpassed, outshot and generally outclassed the Skinkers in every department. The Eagles trailed at the half, 22 to 17 and were never in the running. Dick Allen and Jack Faber were their best bets.

With Heiser and Farris showing the way, Stewart Brother Photographers defeated the Woodside Team, 29 to 20 in the preliminary. Kreh was best for the losers.

Officials of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, sponsor of the affair, also have arranged a series of exhibitions by present titleholders and champions in other national tournaments, which will be an added feature of the opening night.

Nine Exhibitions Feature Opening Night.

Numbering nine, all told, are exhibitions scheduled to be given by the King Pins, 1928 team champions of the United States; Al Fischer, singles champion the same year; the King Pin Girls, women's champions in 1929; Red Morgan and George Friend, who copped the national doubles title in 1929; Marie Frere Whalen and Marjojrie Bradt Smith, winners of the 1929 women's doubles championship; Sam Benson, 1929 all-events title winner; Joe Mulroe and Paul Harrison, doubles champions last year; the 1930 champion Bethesda Team, and Ed Rommel and George Von Dreele, ranking bowler of the country, who until last Saturday night held the South Atlantic doubles record. All of these duckpin stars, with the exception of Von Dreele and Rommel, natives of Baltimore, are Washingtonians. Rommel also is a noted pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics.

Tournament to Continue Until March 7.

The tournament will continue each night, except Sunday, until March 7, when cash awards totaling more than $5,400 will be distributed to the various prize winners.

The opening night's schedule follows:

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

MORO, "the human icicle," performed his refrigerator stunt recently in Portland, Oreg., where he amazed and mystified a large audience. He had a cake of ice frozen in the form of a coffin with a slight opening at one end which enabled him to crawl into the ice block. The piece cut out of this opening was fitted in again after Moro crawled in, and then frozen over, thereby making it airtight. Presenting the idea as a scientific experiment, he remained in the cake of ice for 30 minutes, at which time he emerged and helped to lift the cake of ice into a truck, demonstrating he was none the worse for his experience. No one except Moro knows just how the trick is performed.

The true hawk is a member of the birds-of-prey family, of which one characteristic is the talons with which they grasp victims. The nighthawk is just the opposite of the true hawk in this respect, for it is almost entirely without feet. It can't walk or grasp a twig. The nighthawk is active only at twilight, being quiet by day and hiding in the woods at night.

—Miami Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

TWO well represented fields will hold the center of attraction on the card at Hialeah Park this afternoon, with the Wildwood Claiming Handicap and the Claiborne Purse to be decided over the 6-furlong route.

In the Wildwood, fifth and feature of the program, Mrs. G. Carroll's crack sprinter, OKAYBEE, is admirably placed. She has been assigned top weight of 115 pounds and appears the class of this select group. On her recent performances, the Carroll color-bearer should romp to an easy victory. BLACK WATCH, from the A. E. Martin interests, ran a dull race over a heavy course in his last start and, favored by the fast track conditions, is expected to furnish the opposition. HALF DAY, carrying the C. D. Widener silks, has shown improvement and figures best of the others and is given the show call.

CROSSBONES has displayed speed in recent efforts against better company and should experience little difficulty in showing the way in the secondary feature. SONNELLI has trained briskly and appears ready after a long rest. The J. F. Byers steed is selected to force the pace. DEDICATE ran impressively last start under weak handling and with an energetic rider aboard may prove dangerous.

FIRST RACE—PIPE DREAM, from the Rancocas Stable, raced greenly in his first start and with that effort as a conditioner, should annex the purse. BRANDON DARE, is a possibility for the place award, with CHARWOOD favored over WATTAHORSE and ORDERIE for the minor award.

SECOND RACE—CHOLLA has raced consistently in her previous starts and with that added experience is the choice in the short three furlong dash. VIBA turned in a brilliant effort to run second to Plum Run in her debut and should go as well again.

THIRD RACE—MADELON was beaten a nose in her last race after suffering interference, and with better racing luck should account for the major portion of the purse. GRAND DUCHESS, from C. W. Landers' barn, graduated from the maiden ranks recently, is at the top of her form, and figures to extend the top selection. DEA is unreliable, but appears best of the others and is given the show call.

SIXTH RACE—PERKINS, an easy winner on Saturday, is selected to repeat that effort against the same company. PRINCETON showed speed in his first start at Miami and may upset the calculations. TRAVADO is the choice for the minor prize.

SEVENTH RACE—WHISP turned in a brilliant effort last outing and rates the call on his consistent form. DR. PARRISH was overmatched in his previous start and should go well in this class. LIEUT. RUSSELL tired in his recent effort and should last to account for the short end of the purse.

"You Are To Be Congratulated For Fighting the Spitting Evil"

O. FLINT CLOUGH, M. D.
COLLEGE STREET
POULTNEY, VT. June 24, 1930.

American Cigar Co.,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

I am interested in selling public health to the citizens of my community. You are interested in selling cigars to all America. Apparently there is no joining of interests here.

However, when I noticed your interesting advertisements which pointed attention to the evils of spit from a public health standpoint, and what had been done by you to prevent spit tipped cigars, I recognized that there was a union of interests.

You are to be congratulated for fighting the spitting evil as you do, not because it is going to sell more cigars, but rather that it is going to make healthier citizens. I do not care how many more cigars you do sell. I am interested in public health.

You can use this letter if you want to for publication.

Very sincerely

O. F. Clough

MARYLAND U. RANKS 3D IN DIXIE

Georgia, Alabama 5's Alone Top Old Line in Conference.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—University of Maryland tossers won from Virginia and North Carolina U. during the past week to keep among the leaders in the Southern Conference. They now rank third, with a record of eight victories in nine starts.

After a fortnight's abdication from the throne Georgia eliminated Kentucky and is now back on top, with Alabama second. All three of the leaders have lost but one game, but Maryland has won fewer than Georgia and "Bama."

Duke Leads Carolina "Big Five."

After winning from Vanderbilt and losing to Tennessee, Duke returned home to take the Carolina "Big Five" leadership by beating North Carolina last night.

Standing of Southern Conference teams, including games of Saturday, follows:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Alabama	9	1	Swanee	2	3

De Molay and Guards Win in Laurel Games

Special to The Washington Post.

Laurel, Md., Feb. 15.—The Washington De Molay defeated the Ellicott Hoplights, 33-19, and the Laurel Guards downed the Laurel Independents, 41-20, in games here today. Both winning teams led from start to finish. W. Sinclair, Reeley and Gary were the day's high scorers.

Two games will be played Tuesday night in the armory. The Hoplights meet the Black Pirates at 7:45 o'clock and the De Molays and Western Electrics clash at 9 o'clock.

another box came to life, and stood up, wearing a dinner suit and over his head a hangman's black mask, a sort of stocking with eye-holes and a breathing-hole. The dramatic interruptions of the two preceding evenings had attracted a large number of customers by this time, and as the man in the hangman's mask revealed himself, huge and ominous, his manager declared, "There he stands: the Masked Marvel."

So the Masked Marvel began to wrestle through the tournament. His success was so consistent as to be almost worthy of suspicion, but, of course, the manifest hostility between his own manager and the manager of the tournament allayed any thoughts of collusion. He wrestled every night for several weeks, and presently the late Alfred McCann, the pure food crusader, began to denounce the tournament in print, on the ground that the members of the herd were in league against the Masked Marvel, and were wearing him down by brutal methods, hoping to keep the championship in their midst. If the success of the program had been in doubt up to this time, Mr. McCann's charge of brutality assured it. The Masked Marvel continued to win, until one evening when Mr. Lewis, permitting his personal feelings to conquer his artistic instincts grabbed hold of him and flopped him down with one mighty whop.

MR. LEWIS LOSES HIS TEMPER

By this time the customers were becoming just a wee bit skeptical anyway, and they were convinced that they had been spectators at one of the greatest artistic illusions the world had ever seen when, a few weeks later, the Masked Marvel revealed himself as Mort Henderson, a second-rate journeyman wrestler, in a suit against the management for his accumulated wages at the rate of $125 a week. It appeared that Mr. Henderson had been a stiff or plant, and a regular employe of the management all the time.

. . . and the Telephone does the rest—

Every household has a lot of purchases to make that have been put off just because they weren't thought of at the right minute. Vita-Minutes reminders get action.

Merchants sell more things to you by reminding you than by telling you. That's true all the way from tooth-paste to electric ironers; because while the tooth-paste purchase may have been neglected because it slipped your mind, the other waits a decision—and that decision will surely be made if you are reminded often enough to "keep it on your mind."

But there are certain times when reminders are most effective. Salesmen know it—and no good salesman would try to remind you of his goods, and get your attention, while you were in the midst of a bridge game, say, or busy with something you wanted to finish. He'd rather catch you while you're in a receptive mood; and when you are fresh and rested; and when a decision made would stick.

Well, the salesman isn't apt to get to you at the one best time of day to fulfill those conditions—because that would be early morning, when neither you nor anybody else is receiving salesmen. But you see the advertisements in the morning Post, all right; and the merchant knows it.

Those minutes of the morning hours have a something that other minutes of the day don't have. You're fresh and rested, yes; and partly on that account your mind has a sparkle, a willingness to consider questions and make decisions, which isn't there at all when once you've gotten into the day's routine. That difference between early-morning minutes and other minutes can be indicated by saying that morning minutes are Vita-Minutes—vitalized by a night's sleep, and the way they look forward into a day instead of back at one.

So Vita-Minutes reminders have a way of getting a thing done the same day—a way that merchants appreciate. It's quite possible that there are, this morning, people who have been forgetting the tooth-paste supply, or just putting off having the ironer sent out for trial, who will be telephoning about it in the next few minutes—reminded by an ad in the paper you're reading.

One reason why The Post is such a powerful and valued merchandising medium is that it is delivered into welcoming homes during the Vita-Minutes of every morning. Given the right sort of reminder in a Post ad—and the telephone does the rest.
